Examples

Tony Berber Sardinha
Pontifical Catholic University of São Paulo (PUCSP)

Andressa Salaru
Pontifical Catholic University of São Paulo (PUCSP)

Version of February 27, 2026 9:57am -03:00

Contents

1 POS Dim 1 1

2 NEG Dim 1 20

3 POS Dim 2 24

4 NEG Dim 2 39

5 POS Dim 3 50

6 NEG Dim 3 66

1 POS Dim 1

Text Sample 1: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 46.00 generic_gpt/t555_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this strange mix of invisible and too much at the same time, and I don't really know where else to put it, so I m dumping it here. I m at that point in life where everyone seems to have moved into their own orbit partners, kids, stable friend groups, group chats that actually stay active and I m just kind of orbiting nothing. I talk to people every day at work, I make small jokes, I m easy to talk to, but when I come home, it s like I just vanish. My phone goes silent. No one is waiting for me to show up online, no one is wondering how my day went. If I didn't message first, I don't think I d hear from anyone for weeks. What messes with my head is how performative everything feels. I ve become really good at playing the role of the chill, okay person because it s easier than trying to explain that I m lonely in a way that doesn't make sense from the outside. People see that I have coworkers, acquaintances, a family that s technically there, and they assume that adds up to not alone. But none of those connections feel like places I can land. It s all surface-level, like I m permanently stuck in the small-talk stage of every relationship. I notice I ve started editing myself down when I do talk to people. I don't say the weird things I m actually thinking, I don't share stuff that matters to me unless I m almost sure it ll be received well. I guess I m scared that if I show the full version of myself, it ll just confirm this feeling that I m fundamentally not someone people choose. So I end up being this watered-down version of myself that even I don't particularly like, and then I feel even more disconnected. Nights are the worst. That s when it hits me that there s no one I can text something mundane to, like I saw this and thought of you, because there isn't really a you in my life that fits that. I scroll,

I lurk, I watch other people s conversations happen in real time, and it s like pressing my face against a window from the outside. I don't really know what I m looking for by writing this. I just wanted to put into words that I exist, that I m here, and that it feels like no one in my real life has noticed in a very long time.

Text Sample 2: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 43.00 generic_gpt/t735_gpt.txt

I don't really know how to say this in a way that doesn't sound dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is happening behind glass. On paper I m not alone. I have coworkers, a couple of old friends I text sometimes, family chats that light up with memes and logistics. But I feel like I m always slightly out of phase with everyone else, like I m there physically but not really with them. I go days without using my voice for anything besides thank you at a checkout or have a good one at work. I ll rehearse conversations in my headwhat I d say if someone actually asked how I m doing, what I d tell a friend if I felt safe enough to be honestand then the moment passes and I just default to I m fine, you? because I don't want to make things weird. The weird part is I m not even sure what I m missing anymore. I don't know if it s a romantic partner, deeper friendships, or just one person who genuinely wants to know what my day looked like. I scroll through social media and see people posting group photos, trips, little inside jokes in the comments, and I feel like I m watching a life I somehow didn't qualify for. I try to reach out sometimes. I ll send a message, suggest a plan, and then spend the whole time terrified I m being annoying or clingy. If they take a while to answer, I immediately assume I ve overstepped. If they say they re busy, I tell myself they re just being polite and don't really want to see me. It s like my brain is determined to interpret everything in the most self-rejecting way possible. I ve also noticed how loneliness makes me smaller. I share less. I take up less space. I censor my interests because I don't want to be too much. Then I feel invisible and resentful, but it s a situation I helped create by not showing up as myself. Nights are the worst. There s this heavy silence that feels almost physical. I ll lie there thinking about how, if I disappeared, it would take a while for anyone to notice in a concrete way. People would be shocked in the abstract, but day-to-day, not much would change. I don't really know what I want from posting this. Maybe I just needed to put it somewhere outside my own head for once.

Text Sample 3: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 41.00 generic_gpt/t2407_gpt.txt

I ve been struggling with a very specific kind of loneliness lately, and I don't really know what to do with it anymore. On paper, I m not alone. I have coworkers I get along with, a couple of friends I see once in a while, family I text with. But I feel like I m living behind a pane of glass. I m there, visible, technically part of things, but it all feels like I m watching someone else s life from the outside. I keep noticing how surface-level most of my interactions are. At work we talk about projects, TV shows, the weather, the usual How was your weekend? stuff. With friends it s memes, group chats, and meeting up for drinks every few weeks. It all looks normal, but I never feel like I m actually known. If I disappeared, I m not sure anyone would really notice for a while, just that the group chat got a bit quieter. I think what I m missing is that feeling of being someone s person. Not in a romantic-only sense, just someone who thinks of you first, who wants to tell you news as it happens, who checks in without it feeling like a chore. I don't have that. I m always the one reaching out, organizing, asking how people are. When I stop, everything just goes silent. It s messing with my sense of self-worth more than I want to admit. I start assuming I m boring or draining or just not that important. I replay conversations later and pick apart every awkward pause, every time I maybe overshared or made a joke that didn't land. Then I pull back, which just makes the distance worse. Nights are the hardest. I ll be lying in bed, scrolling, seeing everyone s photos with friends, partners, families, and I feel this heavy, physical ache in my chest. I want to send a hey, are you awake? message to someone, but there isn't anyone I feel close enough to for that to not be weird. So I just put my phone down and stare at the ceiling. I don't even know if I m looking for advice. I just needed to say this somewhere. It s exhausting to keep pretending I m fine when I feel this empty and disconnected most of the time.

Text Sample 4: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 41.00 generic_gpt/t2641_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to talk about this in real life, so I m dumping it here instead. Lately I ve been feeling this weird combination of being connected and completely alone at the same time. I have people I message, group chats that ping all day, social media feeds that never end, but when I close my phone, the silence in my room feels almost physical. It s like all those little interactions are just background noise, and underneath it there s this heavy, empty space. I m not totally isolated. I have coworkers, some acquaintances, people I can be friendly with. But I don't feel known by anyone. Conversations stay on the surface : work, memes, weekend plans. I can be standing in a room full of people and feel like I m behind glass. They see a version of me, but it s like I m not really there. I ve tried to fix it in the ways you re supposed to. I joined a hobby group. I go to social events sometimes, even when I don't feel like it. I make small talk, ask questions, try to be interested. Then I come home and feel more drained and alone than I did before, because it just reminds me that I don't really belong anywhere. I m always the extra person, the one who s there but not essential, the one people are fine with but wouldn't really miss. What bothers me most is how it s changing me. I can feel myself getting quieter, more withdrawn. I start second-guessing everything I say, assuming people are just being polite. I replay interactions in my head and pick apart every awkward pause. Sometimes I cancel plans last minute because the idea of sitting in a group and still feeling lonely is somehow worse than just staying home. Nights are the hardest. That s when it hits me that no one is going to text to check in, no one is wondering how my day went, no one is saving stories to tell me later. I scroll, I watch random videos, I listen to podcasts just to have some kind of human voice in the background. Then I wake up and do it all again. I don't really know what I m expecting by posting this. I just needed to put it somewhere outside my own head for a while.

Text Sample 5: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 40.00 generic_gpt/t1839_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m slowly disappearing from my own life. I m in this weird place where, on paper, I m fine. I have a job, I pay my bills, I answer emails, I say not much, you? when people ask how I m doing. I show up, I smile, I make small talk. But underneath that, it s like there s this constant, low-level ache of being alone that never really goes away. What s messing with me is that I m not completely isolated. I have acquaintances. People at work know my name. Sometimes I even get invited to group things, like birthday drinks or office lunches. But I always feel like an extra. Like if I stopped showing up, the dynamic wouldn't change. They might notice once, say oh, where s [me]? and then just move on. I miss feeling known. I miss when people used to text me just to send a dumb meme or ask how my day was, not because they needed something or it was part of a group chat. I scroll through my messages and it s basically a graveyard of old conversations that just faded. No fights, no drama, just slowly shorter replies until nothing. I ve tried to fix it. I ve joined clubs, gone to meetups, tried to be more open and vulnerable in conversations. But there s this wall I can't seem to get past. I can talk about surface stuff, even share a few personal things, but I never feel that click where you realize, Oh, this person actually sees me. I always feel like I m performing a version of myself that s easier to like. Nights are the worst. I come home, eat alone, sit on my phone, watch other people s lives happening in real time. Group photos, inside jokes, had the best night with my favorite people. I m happy for them in theory, but it also feels like I m standing outside a house in winter, looking through the window at everyone else sitting by the fire. I don't even know what I m expecting from posting this. I guess I just wanted to put it somewhere instead of letting it bounce around in my head. It s tiring, feeling this invisible all the time.

Text Sample 6: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 40.00 generic_gpt/t585_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to say this without sounding dramatic, but I feel like I m disappearing in plain sight. On paper I m not alone. I have coworkers, some acquaintances, a family group chat that pings now and then. But none of it feels like it touches the actual me. It s like everyone interacts with a projection I hold up for them : the I m fine, just busy version. Meanwhile the real version is sitting behind glass, watching, hoping someone will notice the cracks. Most of my days are a loop : wake up, go to work/school, small talk, come home, scroll, sleep. The only time I feel anything sharp is late at night when the silence finally gets loud enough. That s when it hits me that there s no one I can message and say, I m not okay, can you just be here with me for a bit? I have people I could technically text, but it always feels like I d be intruding or changing the vibe they expect from me. I ve tried to put myself out there. Joined a couple of group chats, went to some meetups, even forced myself into hobbies that are supposed to be social. I can talk, joke, be polite. But the connection never seems to move beyond surface level. Everyone else already seems to have their people, their inside jokes, their shared history. I always feel like the extra chair someone pulled up at the end of the table. What messes with my head is how invisible this kind of loneliness is. From the outside, I probably look functional. I show up. I do what I m supposed to do. But there s this constant background ache of knowing that if I vanished from my current life, it might take a while before anyone actually noticed in a concrete way. I don't even know what I m hoping for by posting this. Maybe I just needed to say it somewhere out loud, to admit that I m tired of pretending this is just a phase that will fix itself if I stay busy enough. It hasn't. And I m starting to wonder what it means if it doesn't.

Text Sample 7: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 40.00 generic_gpt/t2732_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m just drifting through my own life as a background character. I have people around me, technically. Coworkers, a couple of old friends I text every now and then, family chats that light up my phone. But I don't feel connected to any of it. It s like watching a group conversation through a window. I can see everyone laughing, reacting, being part of something, and I m just pressing my face against the glass. What messes with my head is that from the outside, I probably look fine. I go to work, make small talk, send memes, answer how are you? with I m good, you? like it s automatic. No one sees that once I get home, it s just silence. I put my bag down, sit on the bed, and there s this heavy, hollow feeling. Like I m missing something I can't even name. I don't think I ve ever had that person people talk about. The one you can message without overthinking, the one who actually checks in because they want to, not because it s polite. I have acquaintances who are nice enough, but I always feel like a temporary guest in their lives, never someone whose absence would really matter. I overanalyze everything I say. I replay conversations and convince myself I sounded weird or annoying. Then I pull back a bit, respond slower, become busy, and that just reinforces the distance. I know I m part of my own problem, but knowing that doesn't magically fix it. It just adds guilt on top of the loneliness. Sometimes I scroll through social media and see people doing the most mundane things togethergrocery shopping, watching movies, sitting on the floor eating takeoutand it feels like another universe. I m not even craving big parties or constant attention. I just want to feel like I belong somewhere specific, with someone specific. Most days I just go through the motions, hoping something will eventually shift, but I honestly don't know what I m waiting for or what I m supposed to do differently. It just feels like I m slowly fading out around the edges and no one s really noticing.

Text Sample 8: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 39.00 generic_gpt/t1067_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it s been hitting me how out of sync I feel with everyone around me. On paper, I m not completely isolated. I have coworkers I chat with, a few old friends I text every now and then, family I see on holidays. But most of the time it feels like I m just drifting past people rather than actually connecting with them. I say the right things, make small jokes, ask about their weekends, but it all feels like I m playing a role instead of actually being there. What bothers me is how invisible this loneliness is. From the outside, I probably look fine. I show up, I function, I laugh at the right moments. But I go home and it s like the volume of my life drops to almost nothing. I sit in silence, scrolling on my phone, half-hoping someone will message me and half-dreading having to respond if they do, because I m so out of practice at being real with anyone. I don't really have my person or my people. There s no one I can text randomly just to say, I m having a rough day, without worrying I m bothering them or being too much. When something happensgood or badmy first instinct is to open a chat window, and then I close it because I don't know who to send it to. It s like everything important in my life just passes through me and disappears because there s no one to witness it. I also feel like I missed some crucial stage where people learn how to form deep connections. I watch others make friends so easily, join group chats, plan outings, and I honestly don't understand how they do it. I overthink every interaction, replay conversations in my head, and then end up withdrawing because it feels safer than risking rejection or awkwardness. The worst part is how tired I am of my own company. I used to think I liked being alone, but now it feels more like I ve just adapted to it because I didn't have another option. And I m not sure what to do with that.

Text Sample 9: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 39.00 generic_gpt/t2429_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but I feel like I ve been slowly disappearing from my own life. On paper, I m fine. I have a job, coworkers I get along with on a surface level, a family that isn't abusive or anything. I even have a couple of people I could technically text if I really needed something. But I don't feel actually known by anyone. Not in that deep, someone sees me way. Most of my interactions feel like I m playing a character who s supposed to be normal and doing okay. I ve noticed how much of my day is just silence. I wake up, go to work, do the small talk thing, come home, and then it s just me and the noise in my head. I ll scroll on my phone for hours, not because I m interested, but because it s better than sitting in the quiet and realizing how alone I actually am. I ll see group photos, inside jokes in comment sections, people tagging each other, and it just reminds me how replaceable I feel. The worst part is that I m not completely isolated. I do see people. I can sit in a room full of them and still feel like I m behind a glass wall. I don't know how to move conversations past the How are you? Good, you? stage without feeling like I m burdening someone or oversharing. And when I do try to open up even a little, I end up overanalyzing every word for days afterward. It s starting to affect how I see myself. When you go this long without feeling emotionally close to anyone, you start wondering if maybe you re just not the kind of person people connect with. I can't tell if I ve given up trying, or if I m just tired. Probably both. I don't even know what I m hoping for by writing this. I guess I just wanted to put it somewhere outside my own head for once.

Text Sample 10: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 39.00 generic_gpt/t2241_gpt.txt

I ve been feeling this weird, heavy kind of invisible lately. Not in a dramatic nobody cares if I live or die way, but in a quieter if I disappeared, it would take a while for anyone to notice way. Days blur together and I m starting to realize most of my interactions are with screens, not people. I technically have people in my life. Coworkers I chat with, a family group chat where we send memes, a couple of old friends I text every once in a while. On paper, that probably looks fine. But the reality is that everything feels surface-level, like I m playing a character who s doing okay instead of being honest about how hollow I feel. I ll have moments where I want to message someone and say, I m lonely. Can we just talk about nothing for a bit? But I always end up deleting it because I don't want to sound needy or make things awkward. I overthink every possible response they could have and convince myself I m burdening them. So I stay quiet, scroll, watch videos, listen to podcastsanything to fill the silence without actually breaking it. What makes it worse is how disconnected I feel even when I m around people. I ll be in a group conversation, laughing at the right times, making jokes, and still feel like I m standing behind glass, watching it all happen. Everyone else seems to have these natural, effortless bonds, and I m just adjacent to them. I miss feeling known. Not just how s work? known, but the kind of known where someone notices when you re off, or remembers something small you said weeks ago. I don't really have that right now. I don't know if it s because I ve pulled away over time, or because I never really had it to begin with. Most days I just go through the motions : wake up, work, come home, distract myself until I m tired enough to sleep. It s functional. It s fine, technically. But it also feels like I m slowly fading into the background of my own life.

Text Sample 11: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 39.00 generic_gpt/t1054_gpt.txt

I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is just background noise. I go through the motions every day work, commute, phone, sleep and there s no one who would really notice if I swapped any of it out for nothing. I have people in my life, technically. Coworkers I can joke with, a family group chat that wakes up on holidays, a couple of old friends I exchange memes with every few weeks. But it never goes deeper. The second the conversation might turn into something real, my brain just shuts down and I default to yeah, I m fine, all good. I don't know if it s fear of being a burden or just not trusting that anyone actually wants to know. The weird part is I crave connection so badly that it s almost physical. I ll be on the bus and see two friends laughing together, or a couple half-arguing, half-teasing, and it hits me how far away that kind of closeness feels. It s like watching a movie through thick glass. I can see it, but there s no way to touch it. I ve tried apps, tried making small talk at events, tried putting myself out there, whatever that means. I always end up feeling like an extra in other people s stories. I m there to fill a silence, to react, to listen, but not to actually matter. People forget to text back, plans get cancelled, and I m left staring at my own reflection in my phone screen, wondering what s so fundamentally off about me. What messes with my head is that on paper, nothing is horribly wrong. I m not in crisis. I function. I pay bills. I show up. And yet there s this constant, low-level ache, like homesickness for a place I ve never actually been a version of my life where I m not always on the outside, watching everyone else belong to each other.

Text Sample 12: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 39.00 generic_gpt/t2659_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but I feel like I m slowly disappearing from everyone s life while still being physically present. On paper I m not alone. I have a job, coworkers who are polite, a couple of old friends I text every now and then, family members who send the occasional how are you message. But none of it feels like it actually touches me. It s like I m behind glass, watching my own life from the outside. I go through the motions : wake up, commute, work, scroll on my phone, pretend to laugh at things, come home, eat something random, and then just sit there. I keep the TV or YouTube on just for background noise so the silence doesn't feel so heavy. I keep checking my phone hoping someone will message me first, and most of the time it s just notifications from apps I don't care about. When I do talk to people, it feels like I m playing a character who s more socially acceptable than the real me. I make small talk, I say I m fine, I ask questions back so they won't notice I m not actually sharing anything. I can't remember the last time I was fully honest with someone about how lonely I feel without worrying they d see me as needy or pathetic. What really messes with my head is that I used to have real connections. In school and a bit in college, there were people who actually knew me. Over time everyone drifted away, got partners, moved, got busy. I know that s normal, but it feels like I got left at the train station while everyone else s life took off. I m stuck replaying old memories because I don't have many new ones that involve actual closeness. I ve tried to fix this the way people suggestjoining groups, trying hobbies, being more openbut I always end up feeling like an extra in everyone else s story. People are friendly enough, but it doesn't go deeper. I leave, go home, and the emptiness hits even harder, like proof that there s something about me that just doesn't stick with anyone. I don't even know what I m asking for. I just needed to put this somewhere, because keeping it in my head all the time is starting to feel like it s swallowing me.

Text Sample 13: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t552_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird, heavy kind of loneliness lately that doesn't really fit into the usual I don't have friends box. I technically have people in my life coworkers, a couple of old friends I text every now and then, family chats that occasionally light up but it all feels like I m watching my own life from a few steps away. Most of my day is justquiet. I go to work, make small talk, answer emails, come home, scroll on my phone, maybe watch something, then go to bed. On paper it looks normal, but there s this constant sense that no one actually knows me beyond the surface. I can talk about work, shows, memes, whatever, but the second the conversation might go deeper, I freeze up or steer it back to something safe. Then I end up resenting the fact that I never have deep conversations. What gets to me the most is that I don't really feel missed by anyone. If I disappeared from social media, I don't think anyone would notice for a long time. People like me fine, I guess, but it feels like I m always the extra, never the person someone thinks of first when they want to share good news or vent or just hang out. I m always the oh, you can come too if you want person. I ve tried to put myself out there the way everyone says you should. Joined a couple of groups, tried talking more at work, even forced myself to say yes to plans when I just wanted to stay home. But even when I m around people, I feel like I m behind glass. I m there, I m smiling, I m laughing at the right times, but it feels like acting. I leave feeling more drained and somehow lonelier than before. I don't know if this is just who I am now, or if I m missing some basic social skill everyone else learned a long time ago. It s like there s a version of me that could connect and be known, but it s stuck under layers of awkwardness, fear of rejection, and justtiredness. Anyway, I m not sure what I m hoping for by posting this. I just needed to put into words how isolating it feels to be surrounded by people and still feel like a ghost.

Text Sample 14: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t1740_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is just background noise. I have people around me, technically. Coworkers, a few acquaintances I can text sometimes, family that I see on holidays. But I don't feel known by anyone. Most of my interactions are surface-level : How was your weekend? Busy, you? and then we both move on. Nobody actually wants the real answer, and I ve kind of forgotten how to give it. I come home, close the door, and it s like I vanish. No one is expecting me, no one is checking in. If I disappeared, there would probably be a delay before anyone realized something was off. I keep thinking about that more than I probably should. What s weird is that I used to have friends. Not a ton, but enough that I felt like I had a place. Over the years it s been this slow, quiet drifting apart. People move, get partners, have kids, get busier. I don't blame them. But while everyone else s life seems to be filling up, mine feels like it s been slowly emptied out. Now I scroll through old chats and it s just a graveyard of conversations that ended with we should catch up soon that never happened. I ve tried things people suggest : hobby groups, going out more, messaging people first. It always feels like I m forcing myself into spaces where everyone already has their circle. I end up standing there, smiling and nodding, waiting for that moment when I can leave without it being too obvious I have nowhere else to be. The hardest part is how invisible this feels. From the outside, I probably look fine : functioning adult, decent job, not a total mess. Inside, it feels like there s this constant dull ache I can't talk about without sounding needy or pathetic. I don't even know what I m hoping for by writing this. Maybe I just needed to put it somewhere so it s not only in my head.

Text Sample 15: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t2316_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but I feel like I m living next to my own life instead of inside it. On paper, I m not alone. I have coworkers, acquaintances, a couple of people I could technically text if I really needed something. I show up to work, make small talk about TV shows, complain about the weather, laugh at the right moments. People would probably describe me as nice or quiet but friendly. But once I get home and close the door, it s like the world just forgets I exist, and honestly, I kind of forget too. What messes with my head is that I don't even know how to bridge the gap between friendly and actually close. I watch other people slip into friendships so easilyinside jokes, group chats buzzing all day, weekend plans that just seem to form out of nowhere. Meanwhile, I m sitting there overthinking whether sending a meme to someone is too much or if I ll come across as annoying. I m tired of being the person who only gets invited as an afterthought, or not at all. I m tired of realizing that if I stopped initiating with the few people I do talk to, the conversations would just die. It makes me feel like a placeholder in other people s lives, someone they don't dislike but don't really think about either. It s not like I haven't tried. I ve joined clubs, gone to meetups, forced myself into situations that are uncomfortable for me as an introvert. I show up, I smile, I try to be interested in others. But the connections never seem to stick. People are polite, then they drift back into their established circles, and I m left orbiting on the outside again. The worst part is the way loneliness seeps into everything. It s not just about not having plans on a Friday night. It s eating dinner at my table and realizing I haven't heard my own voice out loud all day. It s having something funny or upsetting happen and instinctively reaching for my phone, then remembering there s no one I feel close enough to share it with. It s scrolling through my contacts and realizing there isn't a single person I d feel comfortable calling just to talk. I don't even know what I m expecting by posting this. I guess I just wanted to put it into words somewhere, because keeping it all in my head makes it feel even heavier.

Text Sample 16: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t2406_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m disappearing in slow motion while everyone else is busy living. On paper, I m fine. I have a job, a place to live, I m not in some obvious crisis. But my days feel like a loop : wake up, work, scroll, eat, maybe watch something, sleep. I talk to people, but I don't really connect with anyone. It s like I m constantly in a room with a glass wall between me and everyone else. I have acquaintances, coworkers, people who d say hi if they saw me in public. But nobody who really knows what s going on in my head. I don't even know who I d call if something genuinely bad happened. I keep realizing that if I disappeared tomorrow, people would notice in a logistical way, not an emotional one. Where s that person who does X? Not Where s you? Social media makes it worse. I see people going out with friends, getting married, having kids, traveling, posting inside jokes with people they ve known for years. I don't even want the flashy stuff. I just want someone who texts me because they actually want to talk, not because they need something or are bored. The worst part is I feel like I ve forgotten how to be close to people. When I do get invited somewhere, I feel awkward and out of place, like I missed some long class on how to be a normal friend. I overthink everything I say, then replay it later and cringe. It s exhausting. There s this dull ache all the time, like homesickness, except I m not sure there s a home out there for me in the first place. Just this sense that I m always on the outside of my own life, watching it happen instead of actually being in it.

Text Sample 17: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t1709_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird, heavy kind of loneliness lately that doesn't really fit into any of the usual categories people talk about. I m not totally isolated. I work, I talk to coworkers, I answer messages in group chats. On paper I m connected. But it all feels like I m playing a role in other people s lives instead of actually being in them. Most of my interactions feel like background noise. Small talk, memes, work-related stuff, surface-level updates. I can go days without anyone asking me how I m really doing in a way that suggests they actually want to know. When I try to open up a bit, the conversation either gets redirected or brushed off with a joke. I end up feeling like I overshared, even if I only said one honest sentence. What makes it worse is that I used to have people I felt close to. Not many, but enough that I felt like I had a home base in the world. Over time, life just pulled us in different directions. People moved, got into serious relationships, became busy with kids or careers. We still keep in touch in the vaguest sense, but it s more like we re watching each other s lives from the outside rather than living anything together. I ve tried to meet new people, but I m at this age where everyone already seems to have their established circle. I always feel like the extra person tagging along, the one who can be there or not and it wouldn't really change anything. I m present, but not essential. Replaceable. The part that really messes with me is how invisible this feels. From the outside, I probably look fine. I show up, I smile, I contribute to conversations. Nobody sees that I go home and just sit in the quiet, scrolling on my phone because I don't know what else to do with myself. I keep wanting to send a message that just says, I feel really alone right now, but I don't know who I d send it to, or what I d even want them to say back. There s this constant ache of wanting to be known, really known, and at the same time feeling like I ve forgotten how to let anyone that close. I m not sure if I ve built walls or if people just stopped trying to look over them. Maybe both. All I know is that I m tired of feeling like a side character in my own life.

Text Sample 18: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t2545_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird, heavy kind of loneliness that doesn't really match my life on paper, and it s starting to mess with my sense of reality. I m not completely isolated. I have coworkers I chat with, a couple of old friends I text every now and then, family group chats that light up with memes and random updates. But none of it feels like it actually touches me. It s like I m always standing just outside the circle, watching everyone else be in something that I can't seem to access. I ve noticed that most of my interactions are surface-level. How s work? How was your weekend? Did you see that show? I know how to play the part, respond, even be funny sometimes, but the whole time I m thinking : if I disappeared from this conversation, from this group, from this city, would anything actually change for anyone? I think what I m missing is that feeling of being known. Not just oh, you like this band known, but the kind where someone understands how your brain works, what you re afraid of, what you re hoping for, and still chooses to stay. I don't have that. I m not sure I ever really did. I also feel like I ve forgotten how to let people close. When someone starts to get even a little bit deeper with me, I panic internally. I change the subject, make a joke, or just kind of emotionally shut down. Then I go home and complain in my head that nobody really knows me. It s like I m building my own prison and then crying about the bars. Nights are the worst. The silence gets so loud. I scroll, I watch stuff, I listen to music, but under everything there s this constant ache, like something important is missing and I don't even know how to look for it anymore. I don't really know what I want from posting this. Maybe I just needed to say it somewhere.

Text Sample 19: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t1888_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird combination of invisible and too much at the same time, and I don't really know where else to put it, so here it goes. On paper, my life looks fine. I have a job, a place to live, people I can technically contact if I need something. But I don't feel actually known by anyone. Most of my interactions are surface-level : work small talk, occasional memes in group chats, the we should catch up sometime messages that never turn into anything real. I keep thinking I m part of people s lives, then I realize I m more like a background character. I ve noticed that when I m around people, I feel lonelier than when I m alone. It s like there s this glass wall between me and everyone else. I can see them laughing and connecting, but I can't seem to join in properly. I either talk too much because I m nervous and trying to fill the silence, or I shut down completely and just listen, then go home and overanalyze every word I said. I also feel like I missed some critical social development stage. Other people seem to just know how to maintain friendships, how often to text, how to ask to hang out without sounding desperate or annoying. For me, every message feels like I m imposing. I wait for people to reach out first, they don't, and then I use that as proof that I don't matter that much to them. Nights are the worst. I lie in bed scrolling, seeing people posting photos with their friends, partners, families. I know social media is curated, but it still stings. I keep thinking, No one is thinking about me right now. If I disappeared, it would take a while before anyone noticed. I m not even sure what I m hoping for by posting this. I guess I just wanted to put it somewhere outside my own head for once.

Text Sample 20: POS Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 38.00 generic_gpt/t918_gpt.txt
I m in that weird place where I m not technically alone, but I feel completely disconnected anyway. On paper, I m fine. I have coworkers I get along with, a couple of old friends I text occasionally, family I see on holidays. If someone looked at my life from the outside, they d probably assume I m just another average person. But most days it feels like I m living behind glass, watching everything happen without really being part of it.

I ll go through an entire day at work and realize I haven't had a single conversation that went beyond surface-level stuff : How was your weekend? Busy. You see that show? Yeah, it was good. It s like we re all reading from a script and I can't remember my lines. I try to join in, but I feel like I m forcing myself into a rhythm that doesn't fit me. What really gets me is the evenings. I come home, make dinner, and then justexist. I scroll through my phone, see people hanging out, going places, posting group photos with inside jokes in the captions. I m happy for them in theory, but it also hits this raw nerve, like I m the only person who never got invited to the part where life becomes shared. I ve tried to fix it in all the ways people suggest. Joined a club. Went to a meetup. Chatted with strangers online. I can make small talk, I can be polite, I can smile and nod, but I never feel that click that tells me, This person actually sees you. I leave those interactions feeling more drained than before, like I ve just proven to myself again that I don't quite fit anywhere. I don't think I want a huge social circle or constant excitement. I just want one or two people I can message without overthinking it, someone who d notice if I went quiet for a few days and actually care enough to ask why. It s strange how you can go weeks without anyone really asking how you re doing in a way that means, No, really. Tell me. And after a while, you start wondering if maybe there isn't much to tell.

Text Sample 21: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 30.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1264_gpt.txt
Some weeks I can go days without speaking to anyone. I go to work, I answer emails, I do the basic how are you / good thanks stuff, but there s no real contact. I come home, eat, scroll, sleep. It starts to feel like I m just watching my own life from the outside, like it s happening to some other person I barely know. When I m around family, I put on the I m fine version of myself. I can feel that my loneliness makes people uncomfortable, like it s something awkward they don't know what to do with. So it never really gets talked about. No one is cruel or openly dismissive, but it just sort of floats there, unacknowledged. It leaves me feeling quietly unsupported rather than obviously abandoned, which somehow hurts in a more subtle way. The strange part is I m very aware that, in theory, I m free to change this. I know the kinds of things I could try, the steps I d probably need to take. But I feel paralyzed. It s like standing in front of a door that I know is unlocked and just not being able to turn the handle. That freedom starts to feel like its own kind of prison, because every day I don't change anything, I end up blaming myself. I feel like I m wasting time and failing at something really basic that everyone else seems to manage without thinking. On the surface I m functioning : I get up, I work, I pay my bills, I feed myself. Underneath, I feel stuck, frozen by all the choices I could make but don't, and deeply disappointed in myself for not being braver. I wish I had someone I could really lean on, but it doesn't feel like that s truly available. So it all feels like it rests on me alone, and I m so tired of carrying it. I m not asking for advice. I just needed to say this out loud somewhere. And if anyone else feels this way too, you re not the only one.

Text Sample 22: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 27.00 summary_guided_gpt/t552_gpt.txt
I m 29, originally from Iran, and I ve been in the US for about four years now for my master s. I just moved to Texas by myself because of immigration stuff, and it s really hitting me how much being alone has become the default setting of my life. It s not like this started with moving here. Even back in college, at work, traveling, doing hobbies I ve always been the one who has to initiate everything. If I don't text first, if I don't suggest plans, nothing happens. I ve gotten used to doing most things alone : going to museums, watching movies in the theater, trying out new places. I m genuinely comfortable with that part ; I don't feel ashamed sitting alone at a café or going to a movie by myself. But there s this painful side to it. When I m out, I see groups of friends laughing, couples sharing inside jokes, people taking photos together. It s like there s this invisible wall between my world and theirs. I can do the same activities, but the together part feels like something I just don't have access to. It s not even that I m desperate to be surrounded by people all the time ; it s more this constant reminder that I m on the outside of something everyone else seems to have. Remote work has made all of this worse. At least with in-person work or school there was some built-in contact, even if it was shallow. Now my days are mostly just me, my laptop, my apartment. On the rare occasions I do spend time with people, I almost feel disoriented, like I ve forgotten how to be around others. And then, inevitably, I go back to being alone again, like that s the real state and everything else was a temporary glitch. I ve basically paused dating. I value my alone time a lot, and the constant messaging, check-ins, and small obligations of a relationship feel draining compared to the few shared moments they bring. It doesn't feel like a good trade-off. So I end up choosing solitude, even though that same solitude hurts in its own way.

Text Sample 23: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 27.00 summary_guided_gpt/t967_gpt.txt
I feel like I m just existing on mute. I have this one friend I hang out with sometimes, but I m always the one who has to text first, always the one who suggests meeting up. If I don't reach out, we just don't talk. It makes me feel like they don't really want to see me, like I m just something they tolerate when I appear, not someone they d actually miss. I m trying to push myself to go out alone, to sit in cafés or walk around so I m not always trapped inside, but it just makes me painfully aware of how silent my life is. No one asks how my day was. No one is waiting to hear about the little things. The loneliness is so draining. I cope by imagining being with someone, making up conversations in my head, or watching movies with YouTubers and pretending they re friends sitting next to me. I know it s not real, but it fills the silence a bit. Still, when the video ends, it s just me again. Work makes it worse. Everyone else seems to have partners, families, people to go home to. They talk about their weekend plans, their kids, their relationships. Then the day ends and they leave in pairs or groups, and I m the one walking out alone, waiting for the bus alone, going home to no one. It makes me wonder what s wrong with me. Am I too fat, too ugly, too annoying, too something? There s also this boy I have feelings for, but he always seems to find someone else to love. I m just there on the sidelines, watching it happen again and again. It hurts more than I want to admit. I try to stay positive, to keep my brain busy with information, shows, random interests. I fill my time hoping that one day I ll have someone to talk to about all of it. But even in my own thoughts, I feel lonely. It s like there s an echo where another person should be.

Text Sample 24: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 27.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1446_gpt.txt
I always feel like this time of year sneaks up on me and knocks the wind out of me, no matter how much I try to brace for it. I was taken out of my home when I was 14 and never ended up going back, never really reunited with my family in any real way. As an adult I tried to have some kind of relationship with my mom, but she s a narcissist and it just wrecked me emotionally over and over. Going no contact was honestly the best thing I could ve done for my mental health overall but it also left this huge, echoing emptiness, especially around the holidays and my birthday. October through February is just rough. Everywhere I look, I see people with their families, posting pictures, talking about plans, traditions, all of that. I don't feel jealous of them exactly ; it s more like this deep ache that I never got that and still don't. Sometimes I catch myself wondering if I m being punished for something, even though I know logically that s not how it works. It just feels that way when you re sitting alone in a quiet place while everyone else seems wrapped up in warmth and togetherness. I used to numb it with alcohol and weed, but that doesn't work anymore. If anything it just makes the loneliness louder and the sadness heavier, so I ve been trying to stay away from that. That leaves me sitting with the feelings, which is a lot. I do have friends, but I hate the idea of being the person who gets the pity invite to someone else s family gathering. I don't want to feel like a burden or the stray they re taking in for the day. So I tend to just go quiet during the holidays, disappear a bit, pretend it s just another day. I wish I had a loving family who cared, checked in on me, was proud of me. My dog is honestly one of the main reasons I keep going ; he needs me, and there s something grounding in that. I ve got older siblings with their own families, but they live far away. I feel forgotten a lot of the time, even though I don't blame them for living their lives. I m mostly just venting, but I m also wondering if anyone else feels like this too.

Text Sample 25: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 26.00 summary_guided_gpt/t947_gpt.txt
I don't even know where to start with this, other than that I feel like something went fundamentally wrong with me a long time ago and I never caught up. I ve basically had no friends since kindergarten. Through elementary school, high school, community college, and then a 4year university, I was always physically around groups of people but never actually in them. They d talk, laugh, make plans, and I d just be there on the edge, never invited, never asked, and too awkward and scared to try to insert myself. It felt like there was some invisible wall between me and everyone else. Around 20192020 it got so bad that I printed out a video game character s face, taped it to a box, and talked to it. That was the only person I had to talk to. I knew it was sad and ridiculous, but the silence was worse. Now I m 28. I finished a 4year degree, I have a job, and somehow nothing has changed where it actually matters. I still have no one. No actual friends, no one I can text, no one who would notice if I disappeared. I ve never been on a date. Everyone else seems to be moving through life stagesparties, relationships, trips, all these firstsand I can literally count my own special moments on one hand each year. When I go out and see people with friends, partners, families, I feel like I don't belong to the same species. I feel like people see me as an asshole, or just someone not worth knowing. The worst part is how starved I am for any kind of connection. A coworker making a bit of small talk with me can make my entire day, and that just makes me feel even more like a loser.

Text Sample 26: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 26.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2079_gpt.txt
I feel completely defeated with this whole trying to socialize thing. It s not even just loneliness anymore, it feels like some kind of complex that s wrapped itself around everything I do and think. It s not just being sad that I m alone. It s feeling like I m fundamentally broken in a way that can't be fixed. I have no friends. I don't talk to anyone in real life. All I have is my phone, and it feels like this tiny window where I keep pressing my face against the glass and nobody ever looks back. Every time I try to reach out to someone, it ends the same way : silence, or rejection, or just being ignored until I get the message. Recently I messaged someone and they just didn't reply for a day. Rationally, I know people get busy, but the way it hit me was like, There it is again. I m nothing. I m not worth even a quick answer. I got so angry and hurt that I just blocked them. It felt like the only way to stop feeling like I was begging for attention. I d rather slam the door myself than sit there waiting like an idiot. That s kind of my pattern now. Blocking, pushing away, getting aggressive in my head. It s the only way I feel any control at all. If I don't do that, I just feel like an abandoned building everyone walks past without even noticing. That s honestly how I see myself : something left behind, decaying, not worth entering, not worth fixing. People talk about self-improvement, social skills, putting yourself out there. I don't believe in any of that anymore, at least not for me. I feel like my social skills are beyond repair. I don't want to grow or learn or try again. I just wish the need for connection would disappear completely so it would stop hurting. If I didn't want anyone, then being unwanted wouldn't matter. Does anyone else feel like this? Like an abandoned building too? Like your only defense is to shut doors, block people, act like you don't care, just so you don't have to feel that sting of being ignored again? I even used AI to help me write this because I couldn't figure out how to say it on my own.

Text Sample 27: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 26.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1785_gpt.txt
I feel like I ve spent my whole life standing just outside of everyone else s circle. It started in grade school. My classmates didn't talk to me unless they had to, and even some teachers acted like I wasn't there. The only person who treated me like a real human being was the cleaning lady, who was kind and actually spoke to me. That pretty much set the tone for everything that came after. I tried to make friends in childhood, in my teens, and later at university, but everything stayed on the surface. People would chat with me in class or in group projects, but they never actually included me in anything. No one invited me to any graduation parties, and nobody came to mine. It was like I was always nice enough to talk to, but never someone they thought to actually spend time with. Romantic stuff hasn't gone anywhere either. On the rare occasions someone showed interest, it fizzled out fast. I ve been ghosted after a few dates more than once. It s like as soon as someone gets a slightly closer look, they decide I m not worth sticking around for. Even therapy hasn't really worked out. One therapist ended things after about five sessions, and another never even scheduled a second one. That hurt in a different way, like even the people whose job it is to listen and help don't really want to deal with me. My relationships with family and coworkers are the same : polite, functional, but shallow. I try to connect, but it never seems to go anywhere deeper. Over time, I ve gone pretty numb to it. I just expect to be ignored now, and I m actually surprised when someone doesn't overlook me. At this point, my only real friends are my parents. I m grateful for them, but it s hard not to feel like that says something about me that no one else ever really chooses me.

Text Sample 28: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 25.00 summary_guided_gpt/t670_gpt.txt
I m 30 and I feel like I ve hit a wall with nothing to show for it. No partner, no real friends, no one I can actually talk to about this. It s like my life just never started, and now I m already behind everyone else. I live in this crappy, deteriorating house that I ve been trying to swap out of, but nothing works out. I ve tried and tried, but it s like I m stuck here, literally and metaphorically. I even tried to buy my own place at one point, thinking maybe that would be a fresh start, some kind of step forward. That failed too. Every time I think I see a way out, it just collapses. My job is just a dead-end cleaning job. No prospects, no ladder to climb, nothing. I go in, do the same repetitive stuff, and leave feeling exactly the same as when I arrived : empty and replaceable. My grades were always poor, and that just adds to this feeling that I m too dumb to do anything better. I ve tried online courses, but I either don't understand them or can't keep up, and it just reinforces this belief that I m not cut out for more. I ve tried to use my spare time to do something differentselling things, making videosjust trying to create some kind of opportunity for myself. Nobody cares. No interest, no views, no sales. It s like I m shouting into a void. I see myself as a bottom feeder in society. There are main characters and people in the middle who actually contribute something, and then there s me. No real purpose, no value. I just want one win in life. Just one thing that works. I want to be part of something, to feel like I matter, to have someone love me. But it feels almost impossible, like it s not meant for people like me. On the outside I pretend not to care, act like I m fine with it, but that s a lie. I care a lot. It hurts. I feel stuck in this life I don't want, and I don't know how to escape it.

Text Sample 29: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 25.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1957_gpt.txt
I m 26 and I feel like I m in this weird inbetween place socially. On paper, I m socially capable. I can hold conversations, crack jokes, read the room. But actually being around people drains me so fast. I have low self-esteem and a lot of social anxiety, so every interaction turns into this performance where I m trying really hard to keep everyone else happy and comfortable. I don't feel like that effort is ever really reciprocated, and it leaves me exhausted. I went through five years of college and somehow never made any real friends. Just acquaintances I d talk to in class or group projects, nothing that lasted. Now I work fully remote, so there s no built-in social interaction there either. I haven't formed friendships with coworkers, and I don't really talk to anyone online either. I live with my girlfriend, and she s great. I m genuinely grateful for her. But outside of her, I have essentially no social life. No one I text regularly, no one I meet up with, no group chats, nothing. Most days, she s the only person I actually talk to. Part of me feels like I completely missed out on life, like I watched my twenties go by from the sidelines. But another part of me finds this isolated lifestyle easier. Less painful. Fewer chances to feel rejected or like I m not enough. I don't even know if what I m feeling is normal. I guess I m just wondering if anyone else relates to this kind of chosen isolation that still somehow feels like a loss.

Text Sample 30: POS Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 24.00 summary_guided_gpt/t555_gpt.txt
I ended a long-term relationship a little while ago, and I feel like I lost everything in one go. He wasn't just my boyfriend, he was my best friend, my emotional support, the one person I could actually talk to and feel safe with. In a life and household that already felt heavy and difficult, he was kind of the only light. Now that he s gone, it feels like someone switched that light off and I m just stumbling around in the dark. I don't really have anyone I can turn to now. I can't have normal conversations with my family, let alone talk to them about how I feel. It just doesn't feel possible or safe to seek comfort from them. So I keep it all inside and pretend I m fine. Outside of that, I basically only have two people in my life. One friend I bonded with because we were both in relationships, but now we barely see each other or talk. The other friend hardly replies anymore and has become really distant. I can feel them both slipping away and I don't know how to stop it. I m in university, and everyone always talks about this being the time of your life, but it doesn't feel like that for me at all. I ve always struggled to make and keep friends. I feel awkward and not very social, like I m just fundamentally bad at this. It feels like it takes a very specific kind of person to tolerate me long term, and those people are rare. I have tried to be open and start conversations at uni. Sometimes it seems to go okay at first, but then it just fizzles out. People don't follow up, don't message, or even avoid sitting next to me. I don't know what I m doing wrong, or if there s just something about me that puts people off. Most days I just go to class, sit alone, eat lunch alone, and go home alone. Sometimes I go an entire day barely speaking to anyone, maybe just a quick comment here or there. I feel like a ghost walking around campus, watching everyone else form groups, laugh, and make memories while I just exist on the edges. I feel out of place and I keep asking myself what the point of being there even is, when I m just so lonely all the time.

Text Sample 31: POS Dim 1 human Score 24.00 human/t148_human.txt

Hey, I m Ammar (online I go by Untamed Draws). I m a professional concept artist I spend most of my days helping bring stories and ideas to life for books and media. On the outside, it probably sounds like a dream job. And in many ways, it is. But honestly? Lately, I ve just been feeling incredibly lonely. I spend a lot of time in my own head, creating, thinking, overthinking... and while I love art and everything that comes with it music, games, food, meaning, love, self-care, even things like home building and gardening none of it really fills that space where human connection should be. I m an empath, which makes it even harder sometimes. I feel people deeply, but lately it feels like there s no one around to feel with, if that makes sense. I guess I m just reaching out, hoping to find someone who understands what that kind of loneliness feels like. Someone who doesn't mind slow conversations, deep thoughts, or just existing quietly together when the words aren't there. If any of this resonates with you, even a little, I d love to talk. Whether it 's about life, art, the weirdness of existence, or just how your day went I m here. Thanks for reading.

Text Sample 32: POS Dim 1 human Score 23.00 human/t967_human.txt
I have this fear that one of the only friends I go out with doesn't like to hang out with me anymore but is too polite to say. I always ask to hang out, it s almost never the other way around. We only ever talk when we see each other in real life, or when I text something. So I m trying to go out on my own tomorrow. I feel pretty sad but I m trying to look at the positive side that at least I can do that. But having so much silence. Looking at my phone constantly with no one really who wants to ask me about my day or anything as much as I ask about theirs. I m trying to ignore getting depressed, but being this lonely makes me tired. Drained. When I go to sleep I try to be as vivid as possible to imagine I m with someone. I have these two people on YouTube that I watch movies with because I don't have anyone in real life to do that with. At work, everyone is going on vacation. To see their friends and families, with their husbands or wives and kids. Everyone has someone to go home to. I m always the last to leave, I walk alone and I wait alone for the bus. My dream is to just have someone see me. And want to know me and talk to me just because they feel like it. I look in the mirror and wonder if maybe I m too fat, or too ugly, or just too annoying with the things that I like. There s a boy that I think about always who never falls short of finding someone else to be in love with. It makes my heart ache. I keep trying to keep myself in good spirits thinking that it s for a reason. But even in my thoughts I m lonely and have nothing to talk to myself about. I fill my time consuming information and watching shows hoping that I ll get to talk to someone about it for the day.

Text Sample 33: POS Dim 1 human Score 23.00 human/t1205_human.txt
This might sound oddly specific, but I m curious if anyone relates. I m busy. Work takes a lot of energy, life is full, and most days I feel like I m already at capacity. I don't feel lonely. I have people around, things to do, a routine. But I do feel like I m missing real conversations - the kind where you talk about ideas, interests, how you think about things. Not small talk, not updates, not networking. The weird part is : I don't actually want more friends or long-term relationships right now. Not because I don't like people - I just don't have the time or energy to keep something going consistently. And I don't want to half-ass friendships. I ve tried a few things and none of them really worked : Dating or friend apps quickly turn into constant chatting and expectations. Even if people say it s casual, it never really is. Meetups and group events feel noisy and shallow. You talk to a lot of people, but nothing really sticks - and honestly it s draining. Networking is fine for work, but that s not what I m missing. Online communities are interesting, but comment threads don't replace actually talking to someone. So I m kind of stuck in this in-between space. I want meaningful, interest-based conversations - but without turning them into friendships I have to maintain, without constant messaging, without guilt if weeks go by. Just show up, talk, think together, and that s it. Does anyone else feel this? What do you do with this kind of need?

Text Sample 34: POS Dim 1 human Score 22.00 human/t1776_human.txt

Well, what can I say. I wish I never had a reason to create this post but I don't have much to lose, so here I am. I am in my 30s, work in London and have a good job, but that 's where the good part ends. In general tired of one sided conversations but never getting the reciprocity - be it social events, office lunches/social time etc. In social settings I am often the person to keep the conversation going and take genuine interest in people by asking"how their day was"to"how was the weekend"etc. but rarely do I get asked the same thing with the same interest, they only talk about themselves and that 's about it. People form their small groups ignoring me and then eventually I leave with nobody to even notice. In several jobs that I have worked, often I am the one asking people"hey you were sick last week or your kid was unwell sometime ago, how is everything now?"but they rarely ask the same to me but they do ask other people. I just move one. If I am in an office social setting and see someone alone and struggling (which is often my case anyways), I make sure that I talk to them and involve them but nobody does that to me. Genuineness, empathy and sincerity are barely valued by a good chunk of people I have come across in so many places here in London and workplaces are seriously cliquey to a point that I have voluntarily resigned from a few jobs as I couldn't deal with the loneliness and isolation in those places anymore. I am not saying that everyone will have the same experience as me but my experience has unfortunately been this. I have lived in a few other countries where the local culture was more welcoming and I didn't struggle this much. The loneliness here is insane In the end what I value is sincerity, down to earth, humbleness and sharing similar interests but most people are not even interested in knowing me, so it never even goes that far. So, at this point I don't even know if there is any solution. Just wanted to find some comfort here on this sub and check how others have navigated something similar.

Text Sample 35: POS Dim 1 human Score 22.00 human/t2136_human.txt

I lost my last grandma two months before this new year, and it s been sitting heavy on me in this strange, quiet way. We weren't super close, and she wasn't the favourite grandma people always talk about. But grief doesn't care about that. It just shows up, uninvited, and takes space you didn't even know you had. Not only this but hearing uni classmates of mine mentioning that thue haven't been home in a while and how they miss their parents and grandparents since they 're not from Bucharest but other zones of Romania..makes me feel even emptier as time goes on, while I 'm trying to handle grief in my own way. What s been hitting me hardest is how it creeps into the small moments : when I m walking home, when I m washing dishes, when I m trying to fall asleep. It s not the dramatic kind of sadness people expect. It s more like this dull ache that keeps reminding me she s not here anymore. She was just always there. A steady background presence I never questioned. And now there s this weird silence where she used to be, like a room in my mind that suddenly went dark. I didn't realize how much those quiet, familiar presences matter until they re gone. I didn't expect to miss her voice, or the way she repeated the same stories, or even the way she d forget things midsentence. But I do. And it s confusing, because we weren't incredibly close, yet somehow her absence feels like a piece of my life got pulled out without warning. It s like something shifted inside me, and I can't shift it back. Losing her broke something in me I didn't expect. I didn't need her to be my favourite for her absence to feel unbearable. I don't really know how to talk about this in real life. Everyone around me seems to have moved on, or they assume I m fine because we weren't that close. But I m not fine. Not really. So I m putting it here, hoping someone out there understands what it s like to miss someone you weren't even sure you d miss this much.

Text Sample 36: POS Dim 1 human Score 22.00 human/t810_human.txt

(This is translated with GPT because I don't speak English very well) I m (20M) and today I feel lonelier than usual. Today is my birthday and it feels strange. Only one person congratulated me, and none of my family has. On top of that, I ve been sick with the flu for 4 days, so I don't even have the energy to do anything. I ve lived a lonely life all these years, and it s something I ve gotten used to. About 3 years ago, I met a girl on Discord in a community a friend created. We were friends for about a year, and then we became long-distance partners. It was a beautiful relationship that lasted a year. But the relationship ended on her side, while I still loved her and wanted to continue, since the problem wasn't between us but something external. The breakup happened during the first week of November (right when our anniversary was coming up). It hit me really hard because with her I didn't need anyone else to socialize with. I had friends, with whom I m still in touch, but I haven't had anyone else to socialize with at the level I did with her. (In my family, I was raised in a way where we don't usually talk about our feelings.) With her, I could tell her about my day, what I did, what I wanted to do. She told me about her life, about her dreams, which also became mine, because before I met her I was totally lost, without dreams or goals, and she made me dream. It s been about 10 months since the breakup, and honestly the only thing I ve missed is having that kind of connection again. I don't miss her ; I miss what I could do with her and the fact that I could open up emotionally to someone else. Also, because of how my family treated me during childhood, it s really hard for me to open up emotionally to other people and be sociable. Sorry if this isn't well structured, but it s just what I m thinking in the moment.

Text Sample 37: POS Dim 1 human Score 21.00 human/t1201_human.txt

There comes a point Where getting a message on your phone seems like a rare occurrence You hear the sound of the notification pinging through the room And your heart starts racing, receptors experience dopamine overdrive But it 's usually just a meaningless message or some email you 've received When that shouldn't be the case I experienced this for a while It may have been somewhat peaceful But deep down, I realized how lonely it was When I did the math I noticed that I hadn't held a decent conversation with someone (not small talk), even in real life, for weeks Work for 8 hours, small talk with co-worker, leave, sleep, repeat Life can't be that stale Old friends are all living in different cities, we hang out 2 or 3 times a year where we meet up in a planned spot Everyone 's busy with their own responsibilities Few messages that show up on birthdays And that was pretty much the jist of it There must be way to change the dynamic And I acted on it Stopped waiting for a connection to randomly show up Stopped waiting for destiny Forced it upon myself to start putting myself in places Where there was a chance of forming a social life I didn't chase people down I didn't try to force convos I 'm just a guy who tried to change the conditions I lived in And slowly My phone wasn't just a device I used to doom scroll social media before falling asleep anymore You can do it too Don't get comfortable with isolation, it may seem peaceful, I get it But if it 's bothering you deep down, do something about it

Text Sample 38: POS Dim 1 human Score 21.00 human/t1709_human.txt

Lately I ve been dealing with a lot, but honestly the worst part isn't even the outside stuff. It s the loneliness. That constant feeling of being on the outside of everything. I didn't go to college. I just started working shitty customer service, nothing special. I always thought I d be more by now. I put so much pressure on myself to impress people, be someone, prove I m smart. Now having a normal low-level job makes me feel like I already failed at life. I grew up mostly with my grandma, and I think that messed with me more than I realized. I don't really know how to build close connections. I don't have a solid friend group. I overthink everything I say. I don't even know how people see me. Some days I feel okay about myself, other days I feel so pathetic and ugly. Adhd didn't help either. I wasn't diagnosed when I was younger so school was a total mess. Couldn't focus for my life, procrastinated everything, avoided friends, stayed home because of insecurities about how I look. I never built any good habits, so I know I d probably struggle even if I went to uni now. My brain just never learned how to handle long projects, deadlines, sitting through boring lectures, and nobody ever taught me. Even now going out, gym (started recently), social stuff drains me fast. I feel awkward and anxious most of the time, kinda autistic in how I overthink everything. I ve been trying to change though. Lost a lot of weight, started working out, taking care of my skin (meds for acne), small upgrades here and there. On the outside it kinda looks like progress. But realizing I m 22 and I should be way ahead drains me of any positive thoughts. I don't need a perfect life. I just want connection. Someone to talk to. Maybe date. Maybe just not feel like I m doing everything alone. I m scared of being a burden. I m afraid people see me as unambitious or boring even though I know I m not boring or unfunny. And I hate that my own brain makes everything harder than it probably is. So yeah, I guess I m just writing this here because I don't really have anyone to say it to. Any advice would be super appreciated

Text Sample 39: POS Dim 1 human Score 21.00 human/t1264_human.txt
I m lonely in a very literal sense. I live alone, and I go days without talking to anyone. No messages, no calls. Just long stretches of silence in my apartment. After a while it starts to feel unreal, like I m watching my life instead of living it. Around my family, I mask it well. Too well. I show up calm, functional, normal enough that it s easier for everyoneincluding meto pretend I m okay. I think the topic of my loneliness is uncomfortable for them, so it never really comes up. It s easier to assume I m fine than to open something none of us know how to handle. Because of that, I feel like I m on my own with this. Not abandonedjust unsupported in a way that s quiet and unspoken. What makes it worse is that I technically have freedom. I m an adult. No one is stopping me from changing my life. I know what I want to do. I know the steps. And still, I don't have the courage to do them. That freedomhaving full responsibility for my choicesfeels like a prison. There s no obvious obstacle I can point to, so the blame turns inward. I feel like I m wasting time. Like I ve failed at something basic everyone else seems to manage. Each day I stay stuck, that feeling gets heavier. I wish I had someone to lean on while I figured this out. Someone who could just sit in it with me so it didn't all feel like it rested on my shoulders alone. But it doesn't feel like that s an option. It feels like it s up to meand I don't trust myself enough right now to carry it well. I still function. I work. I eat. I get through the day. But underneath all of that is this constant sense of being trapped by my own life, frozen by choice, and quietly disappointed in myself for not moving. I m not posting this for advice or reassurance. I just needed to say it somewhere honest, because holding it in makes it feel unbearable. If this resonates with you, you re not alone in it.

Text Sample 40: POS Dim 1 human Score 20.00 human/t1856_human.txt
I ve been sitting with this feeling for a while, so I figured I d put it somewhere people might understand. Especially because I feel like this feeling is only getting worse. I often feel much older in my soul than I actually am, and it makes it hard to connect with people my age. My passions lean toward things like aviation, history, and maritime topics, every couple weeks or so, there 's something specific I hyperfixate on when it comes to learning about it and it 's all I focus on. my current hyperfixation is Sutra Baths. Very niche, I understand. These are very specific worlds that most of my peers just aren't into. I get that these interests aren't exactly mainstream, and I don't expect everyone around me to share them. But sometimes that disconnect spills into simpler things too. I ll want to spend an entire day just walking along the ocean, listening to the waves, watching the horizon, thinking about ships, time, and everything in between. I crave slow, reflective moments like that, and it often feels like I m the only one in my circle who does. I ve tried to build connections online with people who share these interests, but those relationships rarely feel mutual. I m usually the one reaching out, initiating, and keeping things going, and eventually I just end up feeling more alone than before. I always tell people I do much better in person. I hate falling into the pattern of connecting briefly, talking for a few weeks and then the falling out. I just want to feel understood, or at least less out of place in my own age group. I m trying to accept that I m wired differently, but some days the loneliness still hits hard.

2 NEG Dim 1

Text Sample 41: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t2525_human.txt
And disgusting and overthinking and addicted all the fucking time. I hate it so much...

Text Sample 42: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t2521_human.txt
26m from Orlando, my interests right now are just gaming, Learning to Code, biking, and the gym. Other than that, I 'm pretty lame, but I can keep a conversation for sure. Feel free to DM

Text Sample 43: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t251_human.txt
today flopped but ill girlboss my way back into consistency again tomorrow

Text Sample 44: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t136_human.txt
Chill discord made to just be themselves and chat and be goofy

Text Sample 45: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1367_human.txt
I m curious to know : Have you personally experienced any peace, relief, or change through Astaghfar or Tahajjud? Please share sometimes one story can strengthen many hearts.

Text Sample 46: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t2560_human.txt
And now suddenly the endless lonely monotony of the future is laid out in front of you. It is a terrible feeling

Text Sample 47: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t526_human.txt
I can't handle it anymore, I really miss my social life and how I used to be

Text Sample 48: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1442_human.txt
I wanna be a father so bad! But I know thats not in the cards for me. I don't think we re all here for a reason, etc or any of that nonsense. I think life is a just a series of meaningless chemical & biological accidents, & we re the idiots who ve assigned meaning to it. I really don't want to be alone forever. I feel like I have so much love to give mm I want to give it. I wanna spread it but now in the future, there s artificial beings that are replacing what normal used to be so life is becoming . difficult. If anyones in a similar boatidk, don't be a stranger

Text Sample 49: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t032_human.txt
Im lonely and alone from now until Sunday November 1st. Please help. I 'm lonely and alone and alone and lonely and lonesome loneliness is lonely. Help

Text Sample 50: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1784_human.txt
From my dog and stray dogs. Oh, and from AIs. The only words I can get.

Text Sample 51: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1779_human.txt
growing up I always seen my parents fight and fight and keep fighting nowdays I feel lonley most of the day but it got worst I 'm mentally ill to the point of breaking I 'm broken too I don't know I always feel lonely

Text Sample 52: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1202_human.txt
So I was attracted to a girl And didn't want to seem like I am interested in her body or face or to come off as a creep So I told her : hey, I noticed you like jujutsu, what got you into anime She left me on seen and blocked me a second later Did I do something wrong?

Text Sample 53: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1200_human.txt
fresh love and romance would be a perfect way to enjoy that holiday

Text Sample 54: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t121_human.txt
I m a female. 45 years old. I m desperate because of loneliness

Text Sample 55: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1219_human.txt
Been alone my whole life. I am almost 40 and wish I would just die in my sleep tonight Stomach hurts everyday, I shit my pants every 6 months. Tiny dick, I fucking hate this world

Text Sample 56: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1912_human.txt
I 've gone through a lot and I feel like my new hobby is just laying in a completely dark room alone.

Text Sample 57: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1943_human.txt
She was taken. I don't regret asking her out. And I don't regret quitting my job either. I don't need another job where I 'm all alone. Life is passing by.

Text Sample 58: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1937_human.txt
We are a social species, those of us ostracized could not gather food and had no way to defend against predators. The modern age created a new cruelty, there is no lion here to pounce on us and kill us before the damage accumulates. We are stuck in crisis mode, stuck in a panic state where no matter how loud we cry, no one will come. Our instincts cry death is imminent, death is imminent but it never comes, leaving us in emotional anguish

Text Sample 59: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1936_human.txt
Is anybody else currently going through infertility? Truly the most heart-shattering, visceral loneliness I have ever felt :(

Text Sample 60: NEG Dim 1 human Score 1.00 human/t1725_human.txt
I remember their birthday without reminders, but they couldn't remember mine. Only my family remembers my birthday. I guess that all that matters.

Text Sample 61: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2578_gpt.txt
Thinking of launching a new fragrance for introverts : Leave Me The Fu Cologne. Guaranteed to keep everyone far, far away.

Text Sample 62: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2577_gpt.txt
I m 21 and last night I was lying in bed, listening to Bad Moon Rising, when it just hit me : I m actually okay with being alone. I ve always been a loner, but for once it didn't feel sad or wrongit felt peaceful, almost comforting.

Text Sample 63: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1050_gpt.txt
I was just watching YouTube on my laptop and suddenly got distracted by some random woman in a video. It scared me how quickly my mind latched on, like I could get attached to literally anyone.

Text Sample 64: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1725_gpt.txt

It really stung realizing I remembered their birthday so easily, but they forgot mine. Only my family remembered. Maybe that s all that really matters right?

Text Sample 65: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t349_gpt.txt
I feel so abused and used that I m honestly close to killing myself. No one listens unless I shout and turn rude, and I m so tired of always being the one who takes care of everyone else. It feels like everyone hurts me, and I m at the point where I don't even care who I hurt anymore.

Text Sample 66: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1574_gpt.txt
I m really not doing well mentally right now, but I don't want to rant or trauma dump. I just need distraction and maybe some motivation. Anyone up for helping with that?

Text Sample 67: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1518_gpt.txt
No matter what I do or how hard I try, it feels like I m destined for permanent loneliness.

Text Sample 68: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2276_gpt.txt
I m actually really proud of myself today. I woke up at 7:30 a.m. and I m outside right now. Those might seem small, but they feel like big wins for me.

Text Sample 69: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1557_gpt.txt
I m overwhelmed by this constant thought : if everyone dies anyway, what s the point? I honestly don't even want to be here.

Text Sample 70: NEG Dim 1 summary_guided_gpt Score 1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t358_gpt.txt
Turned 21 today and it feels like just another crappy day. No one celebrated, my car broke down and I can't afford to fix it, and now my insurance won't cover my meds. I feel empty and just want today over.

Text Sample 71: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t2650_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people who like me, but I still feel weirdly invisible, like no one actually knows me.

Text Sample 72: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t2649_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people daily, yet no one actually knows who I am.

Text Sample 73: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t2646_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people who like me, yet I feel weirdly invisible, unnecessary, and easily forgotten.

Text Sample 74: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t1567_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people daily, yet nobody actually knows me. It feels terrifyingly empty.

Text Sample 75: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t1551_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people who like me, yet somehow no one actually knows me.

Text Sample 76: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t211_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people, yet nobody actually knows me. It feels like I m invisible.

Text Sample 77: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t210_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people who like me, yet no one actually knows me. It feels strangely empty.

Text Sample 78: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t085_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people daily, yet no one really knows me. It feels like I m fading in plain sight.

Text Sample 79: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t717_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people daily, yet no one actually knows me at all.

Text Sample 80: NEG Dim 1 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t750_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people daily, yet nobody actually knows me, and it feels unbearable.

3 POS Dim 2

Text Sample 81: POS Dim 2 human Score 8.00 human/t2848_human.txt
I have trauma with women as every girl but one had been a bully or back stabbed me in someway. Eventually I d like to be friends with more girls, but it s hard to just feel trusting with them anymore right now. Also I have issues getting alone with people my age in general. I just can never relate, almost every time I meet someone my age I m just never the right genre. I m a furry, a home body, I have no job or drivers license, I m not in school and live in a very rural area. I live with and depend on my father for everything. The only people I get alone with are older men. I m talking 28+, and I ve got three friends I talk to, but obviously ; they get busy, or are in different time zones. I tried making a post to make new friends, and the only guy who actually messaged me, called me his baby within 48 hours. Told me he wanted me to move in. Why? Why is it so hard to find a guy friend who s older, and just actually have them as a friend? I m sure it s because I have a shit relationship with my older brother and my father, I m not looking for a sugar daddy or anything like that. It s just for some reason older men make me calm. I feel so fucking weird for that too like, I feel immediately sexualized for it. I don't know, I m not expecting anyone to actually read this, but I really would like older guy friends. I m tired of playing games solo. I m tired of being in the house because I can't go anywhere. I m just tired of being isolated.

Text Sample 82: POS Dim 2 human Score 7.00 human/t1188_human.txt
im a 20 year old girl who hasnt really experienced anything worthwhile. my experience isnt much similar to the usual trans experience as my transition started in adolescence and ive lived my teenage years and young adult as a female but even my cis girlfriends cant really help when i have dysphoria or raise trans related concerns. its a pretty lonely phenomenon. i have trans women tell me i should count my blessings just because im societally pretty but that doesnt matter because men still wanna just use me and not love me. i crave that pure love or just a allday friend but fails all the time. used to hurt but i kinda got used to the cycle of"guy hits me up thinks im pretty""guy games with me and is nice""guy finds out im trans and seems cool although shocked""guy randomly blocks or ghosts"all i really wanted from them was a friend tbh yet still fail. its just a very lonely life to be trans. politics and a huge part of society sees u as a perverted freak of nature or mentally ill (which is funny granted i actually studied psychology) then men who have to be taught how to love u or dont try at all, and the tough time making friends as a human in America that im sure many of yall struggle with. in a perfect world im someones wife and mom and i dont have to deal with the anxiety of another post on social media about a trans topic being posted and having to see the awful comments. although transphobia thankfully doesn't really affect me personally in life it still affects me emotionally seeing it in society...

Text Sample 83: POS Dim 2 human Score 6.00 human/t1048_human.txt
I moved out of my family house at 15. I turned 17 a few months ago and didn't celebrate my birthday. I get by with around 300$ a month, all my bills are paid for by my parents, they just let me move out. I have never had any friends really. Not real friends and that was okay to me. I always explained it as I wasn't a friend type of person. But I had an acquaintance with this one girl who was really nice to me. She hated all my opinions And I hated hers but somehow we could have conversations when we wanted to which would be once a week normally. But this semester of school I don't get to see her like at all. Normally I would sit with her at lunch but she has a different lunch so every lunch I just sit in the bathroom by myself. I figured that I would be fine just like I always am but i didn't realize how much human interaction was important for me. I normally go to youth group so that I can see people my age who aren't really mean and I haven't been able to go in about a month. The best interaction I have had in the past year was when I was driving from one city to another at night and a guy wanted to race and we just had so much fun passing each other and seeing how fast we could go. I literally hit 105 which is not bad but the speed limit was 60 Idk I just feel as though I am always so tired I am nice to everyone I try so hard I even do my makeup and hair which I use to hate like I changed myself so much so that maybe maybe someone would talk to me but no no one ever talks to me and I don't really get it the one girl who I thought would be my friend was so fake that she used me as a means to lie to her parents about going to stay with a guy she met online I just wish to share myself with someone

Text Sample 84: POS Dim 2 human Score 6.00 human/t2445_human.txt
I feel like I 'm taking crazy pills everyday. I 'm seeing evil outside my streets."Terrible things are happening outside. At any time of night and day, poor helpless people are being dragged out of their homes. They re allowed to take only a knapsack and a little cash with them, and even then, they re robbed of these possessions on the way. Families are torn apart ; men, women and children are separated. Children come home from school to find that their parents have disappeared. Women return from shopping to find their houses sealed, their families gone."Anne Frank. stating events she witnessed that are very reminiscent of today. and yet there was a political push to remove Anne Frank from schools and libraries. that sounds crazy right. How they removed the diary of Anne Frank from our education. its crazy. And wrong. But then they shut down the department of education. that is insane right? like just destroy education for a generation. and no one can stop. and I feel crazy for caring so much. am I alone?

Text Sample 85: POS Dim 2 human Score 6.00 human/t1839_human.txt

Hello. I really don't know what exactly I 'm on here for. I go expelled from my"regular"brick school when I was in sixth grade. I 've been doing online school since then. I have pretty intense social anxiety and only two"friends". I haven't seen them in person in years. They don't live super far away. They are never really interested in talking to me and they 've done some pretty iffy things before. I 'm gay btw, which is relevant. One friend dated this guy who would call me the f slur and tell me to KMS on numerous occasions and she was there for each of them. She dated him for like two years, there break up was unrelated. Another instance we were talking to a guy in our grade who repeatedly called me similar stuff and threatened to set me on fire. She only"denounced"him when he left. Like a week later she posted the two of them and another girl huddled together smiling as friends. The other friend once laughed when some kind of friend of hers was being very actively homophobic and some other minor"micro aggressions". I am really lonely, I 've had off and on depression and anxiety for like three years, had to repeat my junior year because I wasn't doing my school work during my depression. Again I just came on here to vent on a whim. I am scared I 'll never meet a guy or have any real social life. I usually only leave my house like once a month, with my parents. I don't have a driver 's license. When I 'm around people ik (my parents and siblings) I 'm usually a confident person and when I 'm alone I like think of myself as awesome and confident, able to stand up for myself, but when I 'm on a walk by myself (which my therapist told me I should do) I get really nervous about running into someone, especially men, my head is always on a swivel and I turn around if I see someone coming my way, I 've walked two blocks out of my way just to avoid a couple walking their dog two last week. I don't really know what you guys could say but here goes.

Text Sample 86: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t1427_human.txt

Hey, I 'm a 33yo male, no partner and I lost my job. I haven't found a job in half a year. I have been feeling lonely ever since my traumatic mobbing experience in elementary school. I am in therapy, but every time I remember the verbal and physical violence I almost throw up. I am in a sports club, but everytime I ask to go for coffee, everyone declines. I have 2 friends which I see every 2 weeks. But most days I sit in my apartment, incredibly depressed, because I cannot self motivate to do anything and there is nobody around to interact with. I wish I had the motivation to do things that would help, like going out and looking for a job, but I often don't. I 'm really mad with my brain for sabotaging me like this, because I have all it takes to be a happy man with a job and a partner. It has become harder and harder to write job applications and to ask out women, because I have lost faith in succeeding. Is there anything I can do? Whatever it is, it has to be something small I can do and it must give me swift positive feedback. Otherwise I will simply loose heart and stop. Going to the gym works sometimes, because I believe that it makes me stronger and being able to increase the weight gives me a dopamine high. But some days that doesn't work either. I am grateful for any support. If you have advice, remember it needs to be actionable and have a short feedback loop to work for me. I am also grateful for just messages of sympathy, because they make me feel like I 'm not alone in this world. I wish all of you out there nothing but the best!

Text Sample 87: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t2188_human.txt
really confused with my life right now, I have no close friends and no people I can just go and talk to about anything. All my life I had friends who I would spend most of my time with and talk about any and everything but after the lockdown I just lost all of them. I always got along with people in high school and took part in the conversations and stuff but no one ever approached and talked to me after classes. Ive never felt that someone else wants me just bad as I want them, not even in a romantic way just as friends. I thought that when college started I would make new friends and try to do all the things I missed out on during high school. The first half of the year went really well, I made new friends and we had a lot of fun together and I really felt that I was part of something and that I was valued. But then I got into a conflict with a guy from our group, I dont even know how or why, but It was such a small thing but the entire group just stopped talking to me and inviting. Honestly the part I am struggling over is why me? The other people have done things which are even more messed up than me. imo the thing I did was not even that big, They guy i got into a fight with (lets call him A) has done really creepy and messed up things, and everyone from the group knows but still I was left out.Now that I have stopped hanging out with them Ive realised even during that half year no one ever came to me first. I dont know if im haning onto this and came at the situation in the wrong was and tried to do damage control because of my insecurities of being alone. Im so confused and angry and I just dont know what to do. I really dont have a reason a wrote this other than just to get this off my chest.

Text Sample 88: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t2197_human.txt
Recently, I became more and more confident on the idea that I might have depression, but I never got diagnosed. Among the questions, I answered a 10/10 for how lonely I felt lately. It is not a problem of being by myself, I do enjoy my own time. But as someone that has never dated, I am starting to feel more and more as an impostor. Everyone talks about their relationships, or even just situationships, how do you relate when you never had something like that? I am starting to feel guilty, ashamed of my desires, for my need for intimacy. I crave the touch of another human, but also the connection, it s gotten to the point that I can't do anything to satisfy myself, because I end up crying. Turns out the people I speak most comfortably with are men around 4 to 20 years older than me (20f), it s concerning. I can't stop thinking, why? What is the reason that I only seem to be glad talking to them? I have no daddy issues, and no they are not people taking advantage of me, they are professors or colleagues. With my best friend, we often joke about how much of a loser I would be if I were a man because of my interests, but to be honest, is there really any difference? I am still a loser even if I am a woman. The last manga I read was Inside Mari by Shuzo Oshimi, and I related so deeply i had to take some time to think. Today I saw someone that used to be my friend back in middle school, I didn't reach out, neither did they.

Text Sample 89: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t1576_human.txt
I 'm sorry for this post, i am someone who doesn't share a lot, and i would like to share an experience i have had, which is really saddening. I am someone who has been depressed from years. A few months back (this is college), I got super severely depressed, and I was suicidal. I used to be involved with self harm activties, and for once i decided to take help, and then i was admitted. That is when I felt peak loneliness, not one human to ask me where i was, how i was, nothing. Nobody really cared. I thought I had friends. I realised how my living or dying did not matter to most people i thought were friends. It has been 6 months since then now and i havent been in touch with them and i realise more that it was always me trying to be in touch with them, and never them. For more context, i am a homosexual. I am tired of people laughing in the lift amongst themselves by giving sideyes referring to me and cracking internal jokes on me, me asking for help is equivalent to hitting on them, i feel so sick of people. I want to feel included, i want to feel cared for, i do not want to be alone always, having food alone everyday, crying everyday, and not knowing what to do. I have been alone since school, made fun of, bullied slighlty, i grew stronger past that and moved on, but i have been alone and left out everywhere anyways. I am barely seen as a human, more as a different species. I do not know what i could do, i try to tell myself it is not about me but about others, but it is sad anyways on some days. THanks for listening :)

Text Sample 90: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t1553_human.txt

I don't know why i feel like this but when i see my phone with no notifications, i see people around me having fun with others i just feel sad. I have no one to talk to. I need someone i can tell things, who wants to talk to me by themselves. It is juct nobody ever reaches out to me, nobody calls, msgs talks ever. It feels like my absence isn't noted. I am used to it at this point, I am used to sitting alone in my room and watching movies, used to going to watch movies. I recently started watching F1 and u know i want to talk to someone about it. I just jump from one thing to another to preoccupy my mind but i sometimes when i am sitting alone in my room it just hits me. I want to feel important. I guess it is my fault, i also don't reach out to anybody, never talk to anybody in college, i just go to classes and come back to my room. My school friends didn't talk much to me before hand either but i was at home preoccupied by my enterance preparation so i could just ignore it, but now when i sit idle the wave of loneliness hits me. U know when u are passionate about a topic and like to just find someone and talk to someone about it u know like star wars, marvel/dc or f1 or anything but like nobody seems intrested so i just sit in my room. I have started to talk to myself in my head having conversations usually with this girl i liked alot. I can't talk to her for reasons. I am losing my mind. I have long conversations in head everyday but i never talk to anyone, i am just a boring person, i don't like to party listen to loud songs.

Text Sample 91: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t2039_human.txt

Lately I ve been doing a lot of self-reflection, and I feel like I need to finally put some of these thoughts into words. I ve been single my whole life, and as I approach my early 30s, it s been sitting heavy on my heart. I still don't have a girlfriend, and there are moments where it truly feels like something is missing in my life not out of loneliness alone, but out of wanting connection, companionship, and shared experiences. The one girl I liked back in high school went on to build a life with someone else, and while there s no communication between us, I sometimes can't help but wonder about the what ifs. I respected her space and her choices, but recently I ve been thinking about whether I missed an opportunity by not acting when I had the chance. It s not regret as much as reflection trying to understand myself better and learn from the past. With my birthday coming up, these feelings have become even more real. I wanted to take a trip to Las Vegas, but realizing I don't have anyone to go with has made me pause. The long flight, being far from home, and knowing my family would worry has added to that hesitation. I want to be safe and responsible, but I also don't want fear or overthinking to stop me from living my life or enjoying the moments I deserve. I m sharing this because I m at a point where I want to grow, take chances, and stop holding myself back but I also want to do it in a way that makes sense for me. I m curious how others handle these crossroads in life. How do you balance being cautious while still allowing yourself to live fully? How do you know when it s time to step out of your comfort zone instead of waiting for the right moment?

Text Sample 92: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t2787_human.txt
I 'm a very lonely guy at 23 years of age, soon to be 24 in a few months. I haven't had anyone that I could consistently call a friend that I 'd see every day since 21. My parents are a part of a cult called the Independent Fundamental Baptist church, where you 're not allowed to hang out with people who do drugs, drink alcohol, or listen to any music with a catchy tune. In other words, you 're not allowed to be a"normal"person with"normal"interests, or, at the very least, they can't take precedence over going to church. All I 've wanted, ever since I got my associate 's, finally got a job so I can provide for myself, and be able to pay for my own shit with my own money is to finally get a social life, in particular a girlfriend. But considering that I 'm still financially dependent upon my parents for at least the next two years here while I try to get my bachelor 's, I 'm really just stuck in my room with most of my free time being devoted more to playing games by myself. Personally, I 'm an atheist, and I just want to get out there, make some friends, and find a girl who 's not going to get triggered by everything in the entertainment that I like, as they 're also very particular about entertainment, especially around kids when I played Mortal Kombat growing up and personally turned out OK. I mean, is it normal to fear becoming a loner when you don't want to? And how would you guys suggest I get out of this hole?

Text Sample 93: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t254_human.txt
Hello guys thanks for the invite to the group! I m a 21M and have a similar story to many of you in the group : still a virgin, had a couple kisses but never a good one, been on a couple of dates that went nowhere, etc. Now I look back to summer of last year with deep pain. During that time I was really getting it together : I was about to be promoted at my job, school was going well for me for once, I was getting in the gym almost every day and gaining confidence, and I met a girl that I was instantly intrigued by. This girl was incredibly beautiful to me and shared a lot of my interests, and quickly she gravitated to me while we worked together. She was pretty shy but would take the time to talk to me and always greeted me with this amazing smile. But by the time the summer ended, she left across the country to college. I tried to keep in touch as much as I could, but then life got crazy for me too. Balancing school with work became an intense challenge, working out fell off as a result, and the promotion I was looking forward to fell through because they were understaffed. Then this girl moved back close to me and when we saw each other again, she quickly became flirty. One night we were sexting and she was planning to come over the next night, but those plans fell through and life was getting busy again so it was my last chance to see her for awhile. I became impatient and spilled all my feelings for her and she pretty much told me that she doesn't catch feelings for people. I got drunk a night later and drunk texted her some nasty and forceful things and got blocked. So here I am, thinking just last week that something special was finally happening for me, but instead feeling as hopeless and lost as ever. I quit that job as it took a huge toll on me, still in school but have no idea where that will lead, and have been isolating myself and not working out. All my motivation in life feels lost because it seems like when things are coming together, everything eventually crumbles.

Text Sample 94: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t2582_human.txt
I (Female, 18) feel as though I can relate to men who are loners, I see lonely men all the time and it seems normal for men to be alone. I have never ran into a single female like me though, women tend to have a group of friends or at least ONE person they can talk to, I have no one. High school was hell, I was the only girl in my entire school who sat alone at lunch, I went for weeks not saying a single word and keeping my head down, most people didn't even know my name. From grade 10 to graduation I didn't have a friend. I am in my first year uni and I want to make these years count, but Im so scared its gonna be a repeat of high school... I personally find it much easier being alone but I hate the embarrassment of it. I want to know people, I want to have friends. I feel like an outcast.....It would be so comforting to hear from another girl with the same experience as me.

Text Sample 95: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t2466_human.txt
I 've been seeing so many posts and discussions on male loneliness. I am a generally progressive/leftist person so I naturally see more stuff from that perspective and the current consensus seems to be that the men who are lonely are evil fascists who deserve it, they say that men aren't really lonely and we should just leave the house and socialize I 'm 22 and I 've joined clubs at my university and gone to events to try to make friends. I go to the gym, I 've asked girls out and tried every app under the sun but nothing seems to work, I feel so lonely but I genuinely don't think im an evil man, im not saying I 'm entitled to friends or a girlfriend, im just sad that everyone around me seems to have those things except me, I just want connection. I don't understand why people are saying things like this to lonely men, I feel like a lot of us aren't bad guys but just unlucky (and autistic). I keep feeling like I must be evil or something if im still so lonely. Why does society tell men to be more open about our feelings and when we are it 's used to insult us? Im tired of feeling this way, im not perfect but im not a bad person and I know that, I wish I knew what was wrong with me but I don't.

Text Sample 96: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t1843_human.txt
I ve always been introverted and loved my solitude. genuinely love spending time in bed and love being single. grew up always having friends and bfs on and off. the past couple years i busied myself with the wrong crowd and began abusing drugs and alcohol, all i think as a way to mask my shyness. when im intoxicated i become normal and less embarrassed and shy like i am naturally. i decided to stop that lifestyle last year, and now have quite literally no social life. the people i used to hang with stopped reaching out when i told them i no longer want to do drugs. (I still drink small amounts.) i am a 24 year old woman and i spend my nights and all my weekends alone wishing i had friends that wanted to go out and have fun like i used to. I am attractive, yet no man ever approaches me in public and on dating apps not a single person has ever actually asked me on a date. I am a gym rat, love art and reading so i fill my time with these hobbies but it doesn't fill the deep hole in my heart of wanting community and connection with other humans. I don't talk to a single person outside of work. I had to delete instagram because seeing all my friends continuing to hang out all the time hurts my self esteem so much. is it really because i told them i no longer engage in drugs or is it because i am genuinely not fun or desirable to be around? im starting to become so depressed living a life with no one. I consider going to bars alone hoping someone will approach me. Idk maybe i have autism im just so sad and wish people liked me and wanted to hangout with me. watching girls on hbo wishing i had that social of a life lol.

Text Sample 97: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t1194_human.txt
I was supposed to graduate in January 2025 but a ton of unfortunate events happened and I ended up graduating in December instead. At first I was super excited and couldn't wait to finish my last class and busted my butt as hard as I could to get it done with three kids, a house, pets, and a boyfriend to take care of. I did it I graduated.. but the hype only lasted about 30 minutes. Because that 's when I realized I have nobody. I have my kids and that 's about it. My parents don't care and called me selfish for going back to school because my focus should have been 100 My boyfriend gave me a lousy"I 'm proud of you"than went back to playing on his phone.. than I realized I have no friends. I am a 31 year old woman with three kids and nobody by my side. I don't even know how to make friends anymore because I am a stay at home mom and everything is online. Call me old school but I miss and need that face to face interaction. Maybe I am selfish because part of me was hoping for a graduation party of some sort even if it was just my boyfriend and the kids and we went out to dinner. But nothing, zero, nada. I feel so lonely it isn't even funny anymore.

Text Sample 98: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t2402_human.txt
I 'm not shy, I 'm not scared of people, I 'm generally a confident creature. I like life on the wild side, prefer doing whatever I want - I 'm the kind of person people have referred to as the"cool friend"; you know, the guy with their own world going on, is weird and doesn't care, collects shit, makes their own rules ; can launch into a deep conversation on multiple topics, certainly has secrets, not remotely inside of the box - I 'm one of those kinds of people. Don't care about social norms. My problem is I 'm lonely as fuck for the opposite reason to many of you guys – everyone 's insecure, scared, and lacks any personality, and the outgoing people are all clones of each-other who feel intimated by me [by their own admission.] It 's been like this for years, all I find are people scared of being themselves who treat me like I 'm weird or avoid talking to me. Fuck ' em as they 're not my type anyway – Where the fuck do I find people like me? like, just going around. Online? I 've tried different groups online - Punk, Goth, Rock, etc - pretty much anywhere, it 's either not my crowd or the folks there are doing their own thing. Not quite mine, too timid etc. Sure I know where to find those who Connect like I do but – - come on... I want to meet people who are their own person, I want real friends ; a variety of people here. From other circles... I 've seriously been isolated for years because, and I 'm not trying to be narcissistic here, man, but people treat me like I 'm the intimidating cool guy in almost every online space I enter the second I show a bit of personality. Like what the fuck. I 'm trying to find places where there 's a bunch of people like that - rebels, outcasts, artists, whatever... I don't find you guys boring or lame ; I 'm also very lonely, like I said. I 've had the same experiences. I 'm also a shut-in, like many of you. But, you know, I have a different worldview. Help a guy out?... Perhaps just a little unused to this era to be honest. I 'm late 20s, but, it 's pretty clear to anyone I don't really fit at all.

Text Sample 99: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t658_human.txt
For the first time in my work life I feel like the outsider and loser. I had 3 jobs in total the first two I loved my coworkers and we had lots of fun in and outside of work. Now since February I started a new job with 4 other guys at the same time. We have to go to classes to learn everything about the job and these classes are all year long.At the beginning we hung out alot during work and classes, but I started to distance myself a bit because I realized that theres guys are nothing like me, they are very childish, have in my opinion a very sexist mindset(cheat on their gf s and their insta is full of thirst traps of girls) and they talk bad about everyone in class and then proceed to talk to them normal just to get notes. On top of that they think they are the shit and it gives me high school vibes and everything. Now that I distanced abit from them they think I betrayed them or something idk, but we had a group chat but now they have their own(I saw it) and they don't share notes anymore with me and I once asked for a folder from another guy in the company and he said the 4 guys had it and then I asked the guys and they said the don't know where it is It s the first time something like this happened to me tbh. I love my life outside of work and have great friends with good mindsets but when I think of work it starts to give me the ick. I just want the classes to be done with. You could say your fault, you just had to fake it through until classes are over but that s no like me, if I don't f with you I don't fake being friends with you. What do you guys think? What helps and am I overreacting?

Text Sample 100: POS Dim 2 human Score 5.00 human/t530_human.txt

I almost didn't write this because i didn't want it on my post history but i thought why not. Everything has been shit for me for a while now. On the 20th of December a year ago my bf at the time shot himself infront of me online so this time is especially tough. Im still in school even though im almost to graduate and i have no idea what to do with my life i have no plans no hobbys no nothing. Nothing anymore really makes me happy when i get home and im not working I just lay in bed by myself i cant do anything of value. I feel like i dont really have a family because the all feel so separate from me im trans and bi and im only out to my family on the bi part and they hate and shame me for that and pretty much everything else i do. I had a girl i was interested in and was talking to but she ghosted me after we hung out once. Im very ugly and women and men dont like me. I have no friends outside school and few there. I had a girl i was talking too who was rlly rlly close to me and she was like the closest thing ive ever had to a mother and was the best person in my life but she ended up stealing from me and now i dont talk to her anymore and it rlly upsets me i have to see her everyday and remember how it all might have been fake and she never really loved or cared abt me no one has. Ive tried to kms more times then i can count and i see that as the only way out. I have no idea what else i could do in life so i just wish i was dead. Idk why i made this again i know no one gives a shit but maybe i just wanted to yell into the void and leave something here incase i successfully kms just to leave smth behind.

Text Sample 101: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 6.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1026_gpt.txt

Throwaway for obvious reasons. I m 28, and the more I look around, the more I feel like the future for guys like me is just bleak. I don't hate women, I m not anti-feminist women s struggles and feminism are real and important, and I genuinely believe that. But at the same time, it feels like men are being vilified more and more, like just existing as a man makes you suspect or unwanted. It seems like there are simply more men than women, and that math alone means a lot of us are going to end up alone no matter what we do. On top of that, it feels like men generally crave intimacy more, while a lot of women I know seem genuinely content being single, focusing on themselves, their friends, their careers. I m happy for them, but it just reinforces this feeling that there s no place for someone like me. I ve spent about a decade trying. Shared interest groups, hobbies, meetups, dating apps you name it. Not a single date, not a single kiss, no girlfriend, no sexual experience. Nothing. It s like I m invisible, or worse, like I m not even allowed to want anything without being labeled creepy or entitled. Economic stuff doesn't help either. Money is tight, everything is expensive, and even hobbies cost more than I can really afford. It s hard to enjoy life when you re broke and alone. The gym is literally the only thing keeping me going at this point. Some days it feels like young men like me are just meant to work hard, shut up, and die alone. I don't know what I m looking for posting this, I just needed to say it somewhere.

Text Sample 102: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2659_gpt.txt
I m coming up on 40 and it hit me how much of my life has been spent on the outside looking in, and how much of that is by choice and yet I still feel weird about it. As a kid I was the one sitting alone at lunch, not because I was being bullied or anything obvious, but because I just didn't know how to be around people. The older I got, the worse the social anxiety got. I ended up switching to homeschooling in elementary school, tried going back to public high school for a bit, and then switched back to homeschool again. It always felt like I was dropping into this world everyone else already knew how to navigate, and I was just there. My parents tried to help : church youth groups, hanging out with neighborhood kids, all that. But nothing ever really stuck. I d go for a while, then slowly drift away. In college, living in the dorms forced me into more social situations, but I just felt like a fifth wheel tagging along with people who already had their own dynamics. Eventually I moved back home. I worked at a pizza shop for a while. Everyone there partied and did drugs together, and I was always on the outside of that, too. I stayed sober, watching it all like it was a movie I wasn't part of. Fast forward twenty years, and my world is basically my wife, my son, my mom, and my siblings. My wife s a loner too, which helps. I honestly prefer staying home with them and our dogs over going out. There s an old friend I could meet up with, but every time we talk it feels like the same conversation on repeat. I put it off because I don't really get anything from it. I technically have two long-term friends, but I barely message them. They re both really social and always caught up in some kind of drama, and watching that just makes me retreat even more. It kind of confirms for me that I m happier with a very small circle. Anyway, that s all. Thanks for reading my little rant.

Text Sample 103: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2483_gpt.txt
I found this old plushie today, the one I hid when I was 13 so no one would see it and make fun of me. As soon as I picked it up, it was like something broke open inside me. I m more than 10 years older now, and all I could think was how that kid never grew into anything he hoped he d be. Now I just feel like some old, ugly man who s never even had a girlfriend, like I missed every chance I was supposed to have. It honestly feels like there s no saving me anymore. I feel so unloved and abandoned, like I don't belong in this world at all. It seems like everything is made for selfish, abusive people who somehow always get what they want, while people like me just sink. I keep wanting to apologize to my mom for turning out like this, and to that younger version of me who thought things would be different. I feel like I m drowning and everyone can see it but just looks away. I can't stop crying. I just want someone to hold me and tell me I m not completely worthless.

Text Sample 104: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2561_gpt.txt
I m a 21-year-old guy in college and I feel like my brain is wired in the worst possible way for being alone. Most of the time I just glance at girls I find attractive and then look away immediately, because I m shy and don't want to be creepy. But if a girl actually talks to me, even just a normal conversation, it s like something snaps. I start imagining this whole future with her after barely knowing anything about her, and then it takes me weeks to calm down and accept that nothing is going to happen. I already have a crush on a girl in one of my classes, and it s the same thing : I barely know her, but my mind runs away with it. Then after my final exam, a really attractive prospective student came up to me and asked me about the school. I was exhausted, had a headache, my heart was racing, and I m pretty sure I gave awkward, low-effort answers. Now I can't stop thinking about her either. I feel like I d choose this new girl over my current crush even though I literally met her once. I keep replaying the interaction and wishing I d done better, convinced her to attend so I could see her again. But I know that s not realistic. I don't know how to deal with this. How do you handle being this alone without clinging to every tiny interaction? And how do you actually find someone when your brain turns every brief conversation into a whole fantasy relationship?

Text Sample 105: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t021_gpt.txt
I m 17 and I feel like there s something fundamentally wrong with me. I ve always been the quiet, boring one. In my old school I was always alone in class, and I only had one friend, but we were never that close and now they re gone too. When I started at my new school I really tried to change, to be more social, to actually make friends. I managed to talk to two girls in my class and for a second I thought maybe this time would be different. But they don't really want to spend time with me. They hang out with each other and other people, and I m just there. I feel left out all the time. I m not close with my mom and I don't talk about my feelings with her. My dad is dead. I ve never had any romantic experiences, never hugged or kissed anyone, never even been to a party. Today I saw a snap of one of those girls at a party with a bunch of friends and it just hit me how pathetic my life feels. This loneliness feels like it s killing me. Sometimes I think it would be easier to just not exist. I don't know what to do anymore. Does anyone have any actual solutions? I feel horrible right now.

Text Sample 106: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1053_gpt.txt
I feel so lonely most days that it physically hurts. I rarely leave the house anymore. I miss having close, consistent connections so much it s like this constant ache in the background of everything I do. The weird thing is, I don't actually struggle to connect with people at first. I can talk, I can relate, I can open up. But what I really want is someone who is emotionally present, every day. Someone who actually checks in : a good morning message, a how was your day? at night. Just that steady sense that someone out there genuinely cares and is thinking about me. People often misjudge me and think I m just sexually driven or chasing women, and it honestly hurts. I m not out here looking for hookups. I m craving affection. I d be happy with a close, loving bond with anyone, man or woman, even though I m straight. I just want that warmth, that emotional closeness, that feeling of being held in someone s mind and heart. And I d give that affection back, fully. What frustrates me is how many people say they re too busy to connect, but then spend hours arguing with strangers online. It feels like people don't really want to build genuine connections anymore. As a sensitive person, that reality hits me especially hard. I just want someone who actually wants that too, and I m starting to wonder if that s asking for too much in today s world.

Text Sample 107: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1188_gpt.txt
I m 20, a trans woman, and I feel like I m living in this weird inbetween space where no one really sees me. I transitioned in adolescence and have basically lived my teen and young adult years as female. That means my experience doesn't really line up with a lot of other trans people, and at the same time my cis female friends can't really help with the dysphoria or the specifically trans parts of my life. When I try to talk about it, I either feel like I m too lucky to complain or too different to be understood. Other trans women tell me to count my blessings because people think I m pretty, but that just makes me feel guilty for hurting. A lot of men seem to want me physically, but not as a person they actually love. It s like I m a fantasy or a curiosity, not someone they d introduce to their family or plan a life with. I keep going through the same cycle : a guy is nice to me, we play games together, he finds out I m trans and says he s fine with it, and then out of nowhere I m ghosted or blocked. Half the time I just wanted a normal friendship. It makes me feel like being trans is this permanent barrier between me and other people. Being trans feels so lonely. Society and politics keep painting us as perverted or mentally ill. Men either need to be taught how to love someone like me, or they don't even try. And making friends in America already feels hard enough without this extra layer. In my head, my ideal life is so simple : I m someone s wife, someone s mom, just existing without constantly seeing transphobic posts and comments everywhere. Transphobia doesn't usually hit me directly in my daytoday life, but it still gets inside my head and it hurts.

Text Sample 108: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1683_gpt.txt
I m 24 and I feel like my whole life has been lived in a bubble I never chose. My parents were so overprotective that I basically grew up without friends. No sleepovers, no hanging out after school, barely any contact with people my age. Now I m an adult with no real-life friendship experience and almost no social skills, and it feels like I was never allowed to even try. I still live at home because my parents are old and constantly sick. The house feels more like a hospital than a home. My mom unloads all her worries and problems on me, and every time I try to think about leaving or changing something, she shuts it down. I m starting to resent her for it, but then I feel guilty because they did give me food, shelter, all the basics. My hobbies, my ambitions, everything I used to care about has justfaded. I m ashamed of where I live, ashamed of how behind I am, and I m so, so lonely. I don't want advice, I just needed to say this somewhere.

Text Sample 109: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1450_gpt.txt
I m 15 and I finally worked up the courage to ask someone out for the first time. I thought I d be proud of myself no matter what happened, but she said no and at first I was like okay, that s life. Now it just feels like nothing is worth it. Home is awful. My mom is always yelling at me for something. My siblings just suck and make everything more stressful. There s nowhere in the house where I feel like I can just exist without someone being mad at me or annoying me. I technically have plenty of friends, but honestly most of them don't feel worth it anymore. People make fun of me for being a femboy, calling me gay, a woman, a weirdo. Even when they say it s a joke, it still gets to me. It feels like I m just this punchline to everyone around me. I ve had little sips of beer before, and I ve decided I m going to steal a beer from my parent. I know it s a bad mindset to think alcohol is my only escape, but right now it feels like the only thing that might make me forget how much everything sucks for a bit. Most of the time life just doesn't feel worth it and I m so tired. I feel like I can't take it anymore. I m going to see what happens with the beer and I ll probably post again after.

Text Sample 110: POS Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score 5.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1987_gpt.txt
I m 19 and I feel exhausted all the time, not just physically but emotionally. I m either tired, unhappy, or just empty. I ve got two best friends, but one is always busy with college stuff and the other lives in another city, so I barely see them. I don't have a girlfriend either, and that just adds to this feeling that something is missing. I teach at my mom s colleague s coaching center, and I m actually good at it. The students like me and I know I m doing a decent job. But even that doesn't fix whatever is eating me from the inside. It s like no matter what I do, there s this voice saying it s not enough. I feel like my dad secretly hates me or at least is disappointed in me, and I don't think I ll ever make him proud. My mom

s demands used to feel normal, but now they just seem selfish and I don't know if that s because I m lazy or just burned out. In high school I ruined a really good relationship because I thought I wasn't good enough. Even now, when girls flirt with me in college, I freeze. I m scared I won't be able to give them what they want, so I just do nothing.

Text Sample 111: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t1481_gpt.txt
I m starting to wonder if I ve accidentally slipped out of my own life and no one noticed. Most days feel like I m watching everyone else through thick glass. People at work talk about weekend plans, group chats, game nights, the guys, the girls, the group. I nod, smile, laugh at the right times, but no one actually texts me later. When I go home, my phone usually stays silent unless it s some notification from an app or a spam email. I can go days without a real message that s meant just for me. I keep thinking back to when friendships seemed to happen by defaultschool, college, whatever. You were just around people all the time. Now everything feels scheduled and curated, and I m always the extra piece that doesn't quite fit into anyone s puzzle. I m not completely socially inept ; I can hold conversations, I can be funny sometimes, people seem to like me well enough in small doses. But it never turns into anything deeper. It s like I m perpetually stuck at acquaintance level. What s starting to scare me is how used to it I m becoming. The silence doesn't shock me anymore. I cook for one, eat alone, watch shows alone, scroll alone. I tell myself I like my own company, and sometimes I do, but there s this low-level ache underneath everything. Like a constant background noise I can't turn off. I also catch myself editing who I am around people because I m afraid of being too much or too weird, and then I wonder if that s why no one really knows me. But the idea of being fully myself and still not being chosen feels worse than the loneliness I already know. I don't even know what I want from posting this. I guess I just needed to put it somewhere outside my own head for once, because in there it just keeps looping, and I m tired of hearing the same echo.

Text Sample 112: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t1578_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to say this without sounding dramatic, but I feel like I m disappearing while technically being around people all the time. I have coworkers, classmates, acquaintances, a family chat that pings occasionally. On paper, I m not isolated. But it feels like I m living behind glass. I can see everyone else talking and laughing and making plans, and I just kind of hover at the edge, waiting for some invisible invitation that never comes. I m tired of being the person people remember when they need something : help with a project, notes from class, a favor. They re friendly, they say thanks, sometimes we even have a decent conversation. But once the task is done, it s like I vanish from their mental map. No how are you really, no want to hang out this weekend? Just silence until the next time they need something. I ve tried to initiate things. I ask people to grab coffee, to watch a movie, to go for a walk. Sometimes they say yes, but it feels like I m dragging them along, like they re doing me a kindness rather than actually wanting to be there. Other times they say we should definitely do that sometime, which I m starting to realize is just a polite no. The worst part is how this messes with my sense of self. I start wondering if I m boring, or too quiet, or too much, or not enough. I replay conversations in my head, analyzing what I said, what I didn't say, trying to figure out the exact moment I lost them. I ve started editing myself down, saying less, showing less, because I m scared that the real me is the reason people keep a distance. I don't even know what I want from posting this. Maybe I just wanted to put it somewhere outside my own head for once.

Text Sample 113: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t2039_gpt.txt

I m starting to realize that I don't actually know how to connect with people, and it s getting harder to pretend I m just busy or introverted. I m lonely in this weird, quiet way where I m surrounded by people but still feel like I m watching life from behind glass. I have acquaintances. I can talk about work, TV shows, random news, small talk. But once the conversation goes beyond that, I freeze. I don't know how to move into the kind of closeness where you can text someone when something good or bad happens, or just say hey, I m not doing well today. I end up overthinking every message : Am I annoying them? Am I oversharing? Do they even like me, or am I just convenient? It feels like I m always almost included. People like me enough to invite me sometimes, but not enough to think of me first. I m not anyone s first call, or even second or third. I m the person you invite when you re expanding the guest list, not the one you build it around. And it hurts more than I want to admit. I scroll through my phone and realize there s no one I could call without rehearsing a reason. I can't just say, I m lonely, can we talk? because I don't feel like I ve earned that level of intimacy with anyone. It s like I missed some crucial developmental step where you learn how to form real bonds, and now I m too old to admit I never figured it out. What makes it worse is how invisible this feels. From the outside, I probably look fine : I have a job, I make jokes, I show up. Inside, it feels like I m fading around the edges. Like if I quietly disappeared from everyone s life, it might take a while for anyone to actually notice.

Text Sample 114: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t2084_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this heavy, quiet kind of loneliness lately that s hard to explain to people who don't experience it. On paper, my life looks fine. I have a job, some acquaintances, family I talk to occasionally. But most days it feels like I m just moving through scenes instead of actually being in them. I ll be in a room full of people, nodding, smiling, making small talk, and there s this parallel track in my head where I m painfully aware that no one really knows me. Not the unfiltered, messy, contradictory parts. I censor myself constantly because I m scared that if I showed more of who I am, people would quietly step back. What makes it worse is that I can't even point to a dramatic reason. No big breakup, no huge falling out. Just this gradual drifting. Friends got busy, moved away, started families. I kept telling myself it was temporary, that we d reconnect when things calmed down. They never really did. I try to reach out, but it often feels like I m forcing myself into other people s already full lives. I ll send a message, get a polite response, and then the conversation dies. It s hard not to interpret that as a sign that I m just optional. Nights are the worst. That s when the silence feels loud. I scroll through my phone, not sure who I could message without feeling like an intrusion. I see people posting about their friends, partners, plans, and it just reinforces this sense that I m on the outside looking in. I don't even know what I m asking for here. Maybe I just needed to say it somewhere.

Text Sample 115: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t645_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is just empty space with me pacing around in it. On paper I m fine. I have a job, I pay my bills, I m not in immediate crisis. But I wake up, go to work, come home, scroll on my phone, maybe watch something, then go to bed. Days blur together. The weird part is that I can go an entire weekend without speaking out loud to another person, and it feels normal now. That scares me. I have acquaintances, but no one I d call at 2am. No one who knows the details of my life beyond surface stuff. I ve tried to be more social joined a couple of group chats, went to a meetup or two but I always end up feeling like I m orbiting other people s lives, never actually part of anything. I stand there, smile, make small talk, and inside I just feel like I m behind a glass wall. Sometimes I think I missed some critical stage where people learned how to form those deep, effortless friendships. Everyone else seems to have their people from school, college, whatever, and I just don't. I drifted, moved around, lost touch. Now it feels like I m trying to join a game that started years ago and everyone already knows the rules and inside jokes. The loneliness is physical sometimes. It s like this heaviness in my chest when I see groups laughing together or couples grocery shopping or even coworkers planning things without me. I tell myself it doesn't matter, but it does. I just don't admit it out loud. I also feel ashamed of how needy it makes me. I overthink every message I send, worry I m being annoying, then I pull back, then I m upset that no one reaches out. It s like I m sabotaging myself and watching it happen in slow motion. I don't even know what I m hoping for by writing this. Maybe I just wanted to admit somewhere that I m lonely, because I don't say it in my real life.

Text Sample 116: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t1752_gpt.txt
I m starting to feel like a ghost in my own life. I ll go through entire days barely speaking to anyone beyond thanks at a checkout. Friends drifted, family s busy, and I m stuck replaying old conversations in my head just to feel connected. I scroll through chats I m too scared to revive, worried I was always just the expendable one. It s strange how loud silence can get when you realize nobody s really noticing you re quiet.

Text Sample 117: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t1793_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to talk about this without sounding dramatic, but I m just tired of being alone all the time. I m in my late twenties and I can go days without having a real conversation with anyone. I talk to coworkers about tasks, I answer emails, I nod to the barista, but nothing feels like it actually counts. I come home, close the door, and it s like the world just forgets I exist until I show up again somewhere. What messes with my head is that on paper I have people. I have a family that isn't abusive, some old college friends I text a few times a month, coworkers who are polite. But there s no one I feel like I can message at 11 pm and say, I feel awful, can we talk? I scroll through my contacts and realize there s no one I wouldn't feel like I m bothering. I try to be the easy person in every group : agreeable, not too intense, not oversharing. I think I did that so well that I became forgettable. People like me fine, but no one really knows me. And I don't even know how to fix that because when I do try to open up, I feel needy and weird. Weekends are the worst. I wake up, check my phone, and there s nothing. No plans, no invites, no notifications unless it s some app trying to get me to buy something. I end up just lying there, thinking about how this can't be all there is, but not really seeing a path to anything different.

Text Sample 118: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t1839_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m slowly disappearing from my own life. I m in this weird place where, on paper, I m fine. I have a job, I pay my bills, I answer emails, I say not much, you? when people ask how I m doing. I show up, I smile, I make small talk. But underneath that, it s like there s this constant, low-level ache of being alone that never really goes away. What s messing with me is that I m not completely isolated. I have acquaintances. People at work know my name. Sometimes I even get invited to group things, like birthday drinks or office lunches. But I always feel like an extra. Like if I stopped showing up, the dynamic wouldn't change. They might notice once, say oh, where s [me]? and then just move on. I miss feeling known. I miss when people used to text me just to send a dumb meme or ask how my day was, not because they needed something or it was part of a group chat. I scroll through my messages and it s basically a graveyard of old conversations that just faded. No fights, no drama, just slowly shorter replies until nothing. I ve tried to fix it. I ve joined clubs, gone to meetups, tried to be more open and vulnerable in conversations. But there s this wall I can't seem to get past. I can talk about surface stuff, even share a few personal things, but I never feel that click where you realize, Oh, this person actually sees me. I always feel like I m performing a version of myself that s easier to like. Nights are the worst. I come home, eat alone, sit on my phone, watch other people s lives happening in real time. Group photos, inside jokes, had the best night with my favorite people. I m happy for them in theory, but it also feels like I m standing outside a house in winter, looking through the window at everyone else sitting by the fire. I don't even know what I m expecting from posting this. I guess I just wanted to put it somewhere instead of letting it bounce around in my head. It s tiring, feeling this invisible all the time.

Text Sample 119: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t1867_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m disappearing from my own life. On paper, I m fine. I go to work, I answer emails, I say not much, you? when people ask how I m doing. I have acquaintances I can joke with, but no one I can text at 2 a.m. when my chest feels heavy for no obvious reason. Most of my conversations stay at the surface : weather, work, memes. I can feel myself wanting to say something real, and then I just don't. What scares me is how used to it I m becoming. I move through my days like I m on autopilot, then come home and scroll my phone until I m too tired to think. The silence in my apartment is so loud, but the idea of reaching out and being brushed off feels worse than the quiet. I keep wondering if I somehow missed the part of life where everyone else learned how to form real connections. I watch people talk so easily, make plans, have inside jokes, and I m just there on the sidelines, smiling and nodding, feeling like an extra in my own story. Sometimes I m not even sure what I d say if someone genuinely asked how I was. I don't think lonely even covers it anymore.

Text Sample 120: POS Dim 2 generic_gpt Score 1.00 generic_gpt/t1904_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling like I m slowly fading out of everyone s life, including my own. I go to work, come home, scroll, sleep. The days blur together and I m not really in any of them. I have acquaintances, people I joke with, but no one I d call if something actually went wrong. I m always the extra person in a group, never the reason it exists. What messes with my head is how normal I probably look from the outside. I show up, I smile, I talk. Then I go home and realize no one really knows me, and I m not sure I know myself outside of being alone.

4 NEG Dim 2

Text Sample 121: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -4.00 generic_gpt/t2370_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and too much at the same time, and I don't really know where to put it, so I m putting it here. Most days I go through the motions : work, errands, scrolling, sleep. I talk to people, but it all feels like background noise. Coworkers, small talk, how was your weekend? I answer, they answer, but it s like we re all actors reading from a script. When I get home and close the door, it hits me how quiet it actually is. I m not completely isolated. I have acquaintances, a couple of old friends I text sometimes, family group chats. But there s no one I feel like I can message and say, I feel really lonely right now, can you just stay on call with me? without worrying I m being needy or weird. So I keep it to myself, and the distance just grows. I keep thinking that if I were more interesting, more funny, more something, I d naturally fit into a group. Instead, I feel like the extra piece in a puzzle settechnically fine, but not belonging anywhere. I overthink every interaction : Did I talk too much? Not enough? Did I sound boring? So I retreat, then feel lonelier, then get rusty at social stuff, which makes me more anxious next time. It s like watching life happen through a window. I can see everyone else laughing, dating, making plans, but there s this glass between me and all of it, and I can't figure out how to open it.

Text Sample 122: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -4.00 generic_gpt/t1205_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to start this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is just background noise. I m surrounded by people most days work, errands, public transport but I feel like a ghost slipping around the edges. I talk to coworkers, I make small jokes, I nod at the right times. Then I go home, close the door, and it s like I never existed in the first place. No one checks in. My phone is mostly silent unless it s a notification from some app that doesn't actually care I exist. I ve had friends before, or at least I thought I did. Over time, people drifted away : moved, got partners, had kids, got busy. I understand that life changes, but it s like I got left in an earlier chapter everyone else outgrew. When I try to reconnect or make new friends, it feels forced, like I m auditioning for a role I m not quite right for. What really gets to me is that I m not even sure how to be close to people anymore. When someone asks How are you? my automatic response is I m good, you? even when I m not. I don't know how to bridge the gap between small talk and actually saying, I m lonely and I don't know what to do about it. Nights are the worst. There s this heavy awareness that no one really knows me in any deep way right now, and I m not sure if that s my fault or just how things turned out. I keep wondering if this is just how adulthood is for some of us, or if I missed some crucial step everyone else seemed to understand.

Text Sample 123: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t2261_gpt.txt
I feel like I m drifting further away from everyone, even when I m technically with people. Conversations feel scripted, like I m playing a role I never auditioned for. I have acquaintances, coworkers, people who d say hi if they saw me, but no one I can text when something small but important happens. I scroll through my phone at night, staring at names I don't feel close enough to message. It s weird how I can be so desperate to be seen and simultaneously terrified of being really known. Most days, it just feels like I m background noise in my own life.

Text Sample 124: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t537_gpt.txt
I feel like I m drifting further from everyone, even when I m technically around people. Conversations feel scripted, like I m playing a role I never learned properly. Friends are busy, relationships fade, and I m never the person anyone thinks to call first. I scroll through chats and see long gaps, half-finished conversations, unanswered messages I m too embarrassed to bump. It s like I m slowly becoming invisible while still having to show up and pretend I m fine.

Text Sample 125: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t524_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and too visible at the same time. Invisible because no one really checks in, too visible because I m hyper-aware of how alone I look when I m out by myself. I scroll through chats that went dead months ago, hover over the message box, then close it because I don't want to seem needy or awkward. I m surrounded by people at work, online, in public, but it all feels like background noise. Surface-level small talk, nothing deeper. I can't tell if I ve forgotten how to connect or if people just don't want to. Nights are the worst. It s like everything slows down enough that the emptiness gets louder. I keep thinking, Is this it? Is this just how my life is going to be?

Text Sample 126: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t744_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and too exposed at the same time. On paper, I m not alone. I have coworkers, a few old friends I text every now and then, family chats that light up my phone. But none of it feels like it really touches me. It s like I m standing behind glass watching my own life happen. I go through the motions : work, gym, scrolling, sleep. I laugh at the right times, make small talk, answer I m good, you? without thinking. Then I get home, close the door, and it hits me how quiet everything is. Not just the roommy life. There s no one who really expects me, no one I can send a random thought to without overthinking if I m being annoying. What bothers me most is how replaceable I feel. If I stopped showing up, I think people would notice for a bit, then just adjust. I don't feel like I m anyone s first choice, or even second. More like background noise. I ve tried joining clubs, going to events, talking more. It always feels shallow, like I m auditioning for a role I never get. I leave feeling more drained and more aware of how disconnected I am. I don't even know what I m looking for exactly. Just something that makes me feel like I actually exist to someone, beyond a name in a group chat or a face at a desk.

Text Sample 127: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t489_gpt.txt
Lately I feel like I m fading out of my own life. I go through the motionswork, errands, scrolling on my phonebut there s this constant emptiness, like I m watching someone else live instead of actually living. I have people around me, but the conversations feel shallow, like we re all reading from scripts. I try to reach out, then overthink every message and end up deleting it. I m scared I m becoming that person no one really notices unless I m needed for something. The silence when my phone doesn't light up actually feels loud. I don't even know what I m hoping for by writing this.

Text Sample 128: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t458_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling like a ghost in my own life lately. I m surrounded by peopleat work, on social media, even in my own familybut I still feel completely disconnected. Conversations feel scripted, like I m playing a role instead of actually being myself. When I try to open up, I worry I m oversharing or being too much, so I pull back and keep things surface-level again. Nights are the worst. I scroll through my phone just to feel less alone, but seeing everyone else seemingly living full lives makes the emptiness louder. I don't really have anyone I d feel comfortable calling if something genuinely bad happened. It s like I m always almost close to people, but never actually close. I m not even sure what I m looking for by posting this. Maybe I just wanted to say it somewhere.

Text Sample 129: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t1539_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people but feel completely disconnected. Conversations feel scripted, like I m playing a role instead of being myself. I crave real closeness but have no idea how to bridge the gap, so I just stay quiet and drift further away.

Text Sample 130: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t2800_gpt.txt
I m surrounded by people but feel completely disconnected. Conversations feel scripted, like I m playing a role instead of being myself. Friends are more like acquaintances, family doesn't really know me, and I m not sure I know myself anymore. It s a weird mix of being visible and utterly unseen at the same time.

Text Sample 131: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t1634_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is just background noise. I have people around me, technically. Coworkers, some old friends I text every now and then, family chats that light up my phone. But when I actually look at it, most of it is surface-level. Memes, logistics, how s work? and busy, you? on repeat. No one really asks how I am in a way that suggests they want an honest answer, and I m not sure I d know how to give one if they did. I go through whole days where I don't say anything that feels like me. It s all autopilot small talk. When I get home, it s just this heavy silence, like the air gets thicker. I put on YouTube or a podcast just to have voices in the room, but it doesn't fix the feeling that I could vanish and it would mostly just be an inconvenience to a few people s schedules. I ve tried reaching out more. I ll message someone and stare at online next to their name while they don't reply, then watch them post on social media. That weird mix of being invisible and still somehow too much. It stings more than I want to admit. What scares me is how normal this is starting to feel. The weekends blur together : errands, scrolling, pretending I m fine. I don't even know what I d talk about if someone genuinely wanted to know me. I ve spent so long being okay for everyone else that I m not sure there s anything underneath it anymore. I m not even sure what I m hoping for by writing this. Maybe just to put it somewhere outside my own head for once.

Text Sample 132: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t2770_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and too exposed at the same time. On paper, I m not alone. I have coworkers I get along with, a couple of old friends I text sometimes, family chats that light up my phone. But most of it feels like background noise. I can go days without anyone asking me anything deeper than How s work? or Did you see that show? and I m starting to feel like I m fading into this role of person who is fine and functioning when I m really not. I miss having someone who actually knows what my days feel like. Not just the highlights I choose to share, but the small stuff : what I m worried about, what I m secretly proud of, the random thought that made me laugh. I catch myself rehearsing conversations in my head that never actually happen, because I don't know who to send them to without feeling like I m bothering them. I ve tried joining groups, going out more, saying yes to things. I can be social in short bursts, but it never seems to move past that surface layer. People already have their circles, their inside jokes, their history. I m always the new person, even in places I ve been going to for months. It s a strange kind of exhaustion, being surrounded by people and still feeling like nobody would really notice if I quietly stopped showing up.

Text Sample 133: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t1411_gpt.txt
I m starting to feel like I m disappearing while still being technically around people. I have coworkers, family chats, a couple of old friends I text every now and then, but I don't feel actually known by anyone. Every interaction feels like I m playing a role : the reliable one, the listener, the person who seems fine. When the day ends and I m alone in my room, it hits me how little of my real thoughts I ve shared with anyone. I scroll, watch videos, send memes, but it all feels like noise to cover up the silence. I don't even know how to bridge the gap anymorehow do you go from surface-level small talk to saying, I m lonely, and I don't know how to fix it, without making everything weird? It s like I m waiting for someone to notice, but I m also hiding it so they never will.

Text Sample 134: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t1523_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is happening behind a pane of glass. From the outside, things look fine. I have a job, I respond to messages, I show up when I m supposed to. People would probably describe me as quiet but nice. I m not completely isolated. I have acquaintances, a group chat that occasionally pings, coworkers who ask how my weekend was. But it all feels so thin, like I m playing a role and everyone else is actually living. What gets to me most is the lack of emotional closeness. I don't have that person I can text when something small but important happens. I don't have anyone who knows the full, messy version of me. Conversations stay on the surface : work, memes, how are you? followed by the scripted I m good, you? I can't remember the last time someone asked me how I really was and actually wanted the honest answer. I ve tried to put myself out there. I go to meetups, I reply in group chats, I ask people questions, I listen. But I always end up feeling like the extra person in a group photo, the one who could be cropped out and nothing would change. People seem to already have their circles, their best friends, their shared histories. I m the convenient add-on, never the person someone thinks of first. What scares me is how normalized this is becoming for me. I m getting used to eating alone, going places alone, having no one to debrief the day with. I tell myself I prefer it that way because it hurts less than admitting I don't know how to bridge this gap. There s this constant ache of wanting to be known and the equally strong fear that if I actually showed who I am, it would just confirm that I m forgettable or too much or not enough. So I stay in this weird limbo : present but not really seen, surrounded by people but still somehow completely on my own.

Text Sample 135: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t1772_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and too exposed at the same time. I m surrounded by people every day coworkers, neighbors, random faces on the train but it all feels like background noise. I talk to people, joke around, do the small talk thing, but it never goes any deeper. It s like I m playing a role and nobody notices that there s an actual person underneath. What really gets to me is how my phone can stay silent for days unless I m the one who starts the conversation. And even then, replies are slow or short, like I m an obligation. I see other people making plans, posting photos with friends, and I can't remember the last time someone said, Hey, do you want to come? without me hinting first. It makes me wonder if I m just fundamentally forgettable.

Text Sample 136: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t1063_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling like a background character in my own life lately. I go through the motionswork, errands, scrolling on my phonebut it all feels like I m moving behind glass. People talk to me, I respond, we joke around, but it never feels like it actually reaches me. It s like I m playing the role of normal person and everyone else believes it except me. What bothers me most is how hard it is to admit this out loud. I have friends, but they re more like people I orbit around than people I m truly close to. I don't know how to bridge that gap without sounding needy or weird. I keep waiting for someone to notice that I m not really okay, but at the same time I hide it so well that no one could. There s this quiet panic underneath everything : what if this is just how it s going to be.

Text Sample 137: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t1750_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and exposed lately, and I don't really know how to explain it to anyone in my life without sounding dramatic, so I m putting it here instead. On paper I m not alone. I have coworkers, a couple of old friends I text now and then, family chats that light up on holidays. But it all feels like background noise. I can go days without anyone asking me a real question about how I m doing, and if they do, I give the safe answer because I m not sure they actually want to know. I think what s getting to me is the sense that I m just not really known by anyone. People know facts about memy job, my hobbies, where I livebut not the stuff that actually keeps me awake at night or the small things that make me feel like a person. I ll have a conversation, laugh at the right places, say the right things, and then go home feeling like I played a role instead of being myself. I used to think loneliness was about being physically alone, but lately it feels more like this constant mismatch between the amount of connection I need and the amount I actually have. I scroll through social media, see everyone s group photos and inside jokes, and it s like watching life from the outside of a window. I m there, but not really in anything. I don't even know what I m expecting from posting this. I guess I just wanted to put this somewhere, to say out loud (or as close as I can get) that I m tired of feeling like a background character in my own life. It s starting to feel less like a phase and more like the default setting.

Text Sample 138: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t2620_gpt.txt
I m starting to realize I don't actually know how to connect with people anymore. I can make small talk, I can be polite, but it all feels like I m playing a character and everyone else got the real script. I have acquaintances, coworkers, people I message sometimes, but no one I d call if something genuinely bad happened. I scroll through my contacts and feel this weird mix of embarrassment and emptiness, like I d be bothering them or they wouldn't care. What makes it worse is how invisible it feels. From the outside, my life probably looks fine. Inside, it s like I m always a step removed, watching everyone else actually live while I m just filling time.

Text Sample 139: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t2487_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this to people in my life without sounding dramatic, so I m dumping it here instead. I m surrounded by people, technically. Coworkers, acquaintances, family chats, group messages that light up my phone. But it all feels like background noise. I can go days without anyone asking how I actually am, and honestly, I m not sure they d want the real answer anyway. I ve noticed I ve started rehearsing conversations in my head before I talk to anyone, like I m auditioning for the role of normal person. I keep things light, crack jokes, ask about them, and then afterward I feel weirdly hollow, like I wasn't really there. The worst part is how embarrassed I feel about wanting deeper connection. It feels needy, or childish, or like something I should ve figured out years ago. So I keep quiet, and the gap just keeps getting wider.

Text Sample 140: NEG Dim 2 generic_gpt Score -3.00 generic_gpt/t2522_gpt.txt

I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and too much at the same time. I m surrounded by people most dayswork, errands, family textsbut it all feels like background noise. I go through the motions, say the right things, laugh at the right moments, and then come home and feel like I don't actually exist in anyone s mind once I m out of sight. What bothers me is how hard it is to be honest about this with people I know. If I say I m lonely, they assume I m asking for attention or that I m criticizing them for not doing enough. So I keep it vague : I m tired, Just busy, All good. Meanwhile, there s this constant ache that no one really knows me beyond the surface layer. I miss having someone I can message randomly without feeling like I m bothering them, someone who actually notices if I disappear for a bit. It s strange how you can be reachable 24/7 and still feel completely out of reach.

Text Sample 141: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -3.00 summary_guided_gpt/t398_gpt.txt
I m 30 and I feel like I ve been lonely my entire life. It s not just I don't have plans this weekend lonely, it s this deep, constant emptiness that never really goes away. I m so tired of living like this. I wouldn't act on those thoughts because I have a family and kids who need me, but it feels like I m just enduring life rather than living it. Work doesn't help. I can't seem to find a job that gives me real human interaction. Even when I m technically with people, like working with clients, it feels like I m just performing a role. It s all surface-level, scripts and small talk, nothing that fills that need for actual connection. I was recently diagnosed as autistic, and it explains so much, but it also makes me feel kind of hopeless. My whole life of struggling to make friends, to find people on my intellectual level, to feel understoodit suddenly makes sense, but it doesn't fix anything. I still feel like I make no real difference in the world. Like if I disappeared, everything would just keep going the same. What scares me most is my kids. If I can't form real connections, how am I supposed to teach them how to? I don't want them to grow up feeling this same emptiness. I know I m not alone in feeling lonely. I see so many people saying they feel this way too. But how does knowing that actually help when I still go to bed every night feeling like this?

Text Sample 142: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -3.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1358_gpt.txt
Every year around this time I feel this knot in my stomach start to tighten. I ve never really liked the holidays. For 16+ years my role was basically cook, waiter, and dishwasher. Everyone else sat together, laughed, watched TV, opened presents and I was in the kitchen, serving, cleaning, eating alone. If I sat down too long, someone would call my name like I was staff. On top of that, I d get pressured into buying expensive, last-minute gifts I couldn't really afford. If I didn't, I d be guilted. When I did, the gifts were brushed off or criticized. Meanwhile, I d get something small or thoughtless in return. It just drove home how taken for granted I was. Even my ex would throw tantrums about going to these family things, which somehow made it all feel even worse. I finally moved to another state, away from all of that. No more being the unpaid help, no more drama, no more fake family time. I m not putting up a tree, not decorating, not doing anything holiday-related. Part of me feels like there s no point to any of it. But what s messing with my head is that I kind of miss the chaos. I don't miss them, or how I was treated, but I miss something. The noise? The distraction? Now it s just quiet, and lonely, and I haven't found any sense of calm in it yet. It s like I escaped, but I don't know what to do with the emptiness that s left.

Text Sample 143: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -2.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2356_gpt.txt
I live mostly off the grid in the Canadian forest, and even out here, away from the noise, loneliness still finds me sometimes. I don't think anyone is immune to it, especially introverts. What I ve learned is that if I just sit in it too long, it can start to feel like depression creeping in. To keep that from happening, I try to stay active in small, simple ways. I play music, make a bit of art, move my body, and spend a lot of time just observing nature the trees, birds, changing light. Those things give me a sense of connection, even when I m physically alone. I also avoid the stuff that seems to pull me down : alcohol, drugs, smoking, overeating, dark or sad media, and social media. They all seem to amplify the emptiness. I try to focus on maintaining positive thoughts instead, even if it s just appreciating a quiet moment or a sunset through the trees.

Text Sample 144: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -2.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2771_gpt.txt
I keep seeing people mix up being a loner with being lonely, and it really bothers me. For me, being a loner is a choice. I actually like being on my own. I need that time to decompress, think, and just feel at peace without noise or expectations from other people. Social media and society in general push this idea that you have to have a huge friend group, constant plans, and an active social life to be happy. I used to buy into that and feel like there was something wrong with me for not living that way. I don't believe that anymore. It s perfectly fine to have just a few friends and still enjoy your life. Some of my favorite moments are things I do alone : walking in the woods, feeling the quiet around me, or looking up at the stars and just existing for a while. There s nothing sad or broken about that. If you re a loner, you re not automatically weird or messed up. Don't let other people s comments or the pressure from social media get in your head. It s okay to choose calm and peace over constant socializing. There s value in that too.

Text Sample 145: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -2.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2805_gpt.txt
I m 24 and I feel like I m slowly losing all my people to real life. Most of my closest friends either have kids now or are in serious relationships, and it feels like I m at the bottom of their priority list. We barely hang out, barely text, and when I do reach out it s always I m so busy or we ll catch up soon and then nothing. Everyone loves to say we don't have to talk all the time to care, but honestly, I hate that. I don't want friendships that only exist in theory. I want the dumb, low-key stuff : grabbing coffee, running errands together, hanging out in sweatpants doing nothing. Instead, it feels like the only time people show up for me is when something dramatic happens. Like recently, I had a car issue and my best friend came through immediately to help. And I appreciated it, I really did. But that same friend didn't come to my birthday. None of my closest friends did. I ended up celebrating with more casual acquaintances, and it just hit me how backwards it all feels. They ll drop everything for a crisis, but not for just being in my life. It makes me feel like I only matter when things are on fire. The rest of the time I m just background noise. I ve kind of accepted that I ll be doing most things alone, at least for now. Maybe someday a partner will fill that role of person I actually see and talk to regularly, because it clearly isn't my friends anymore. I know I m being a bit whiny and jaded about it today, but it really hurts. I miss feeling like someone s first choice, not their emergency contact.

Text Sample 146: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -2.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1536_gpt.txt
It s hard to put into words how empty I feel most of the time. It s not just being alone, it s like there s this hollow space where a sense of me should be. I always feel like I quietly fade out of people s lives, like I m forgettable background noise. There s nothing special or important about me that anyone seems to notice or care about. What hurts is that even when people I care about hurt me, I still love them. I keep taking it, because I don't want them to feel this kind of loneliness. It feels like my role is to absorb the pain. To anyone else feeling this way : I m sending you love and strength.

Text Sample 147: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -2.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1608_gpt.txt
Lately I feel like I m stuck in this weird inbetween state where I can't even tell what s wrong with me. I don't know if I m just exhausted, misunderstood, or actually lonely. It s like I m emotionally numb most of the time. I really struggle to make genuine, deep connections. Almost every interaction feels surfacelevel, like I m playing a role instead of actually being there. Even with the two close friends I do have, there s still this distance I can't seem to cross. I care about them, but sometimes supporting them feels draining, like I m running on empty and still trying to pour into other people. The numbness is confusing too. Sometimes it s a relief not to feel everything so intensely. But other times I just wish I could feel anything at all, because this emptiness makes me feel even more alone.

Text Sample 148: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -2.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1019_gpt.txt
I m 32, married, with three kids of my own and one stepchild. On paper, I shouldn't feel this way. I do have friends and I see them when I can, but I still feel this constant emptiness and loneliness I can't shake. My husband works full-time, five days a week, and on his days off he s usually with his friends. Realistically, I get maybe one day a week with him. I keep telling myself I should be grateful for what I have, but it doesn't make the lonely, empty gap go away. How do you cope with this feeling? What do you do to fill that gap?

Text Sample 149: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -2.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1080_gpt.txt
I don't even know how to explain this without feeling ridiculous, but I m surrounded by people and still feel completely alone. I have family, friends, acquaintances. On paper, I shouldn't be lonely. But I feel like I m behind glass all the time. I m terrified of being vulnerable or showing that I m struggling with depression, fear, shame, any of it because all I can imagine is embarrassment, judgment, rejection, and people eventually walking away. So I edit myself constantly. I change parts of my personality to fit whatever group I m in. I laugh at things I don't find funny, agree with things I don't agree with, act like everything is easy. But no matter what I do, I never feel like I actually belong. I m always on the outside, even when I m in the middle of the room. It really hurts seeing my family get along naturally, joking and talking, while my interactions feel stiff and forced. With friends, I m nice and try to be supportive, but there s this emptiness behind it, like I m playing a role rather than being myself. No one knows how pessimistic and selfdeprecating my thoughts are. They think I m fine, maybe even doing well, and I justlet them think that. Part of why it s so hard to open up is past stuff. I ve been criticized a lot for being incompetent and I ve been mocked for crying. That kind of thing sticks. Now, asking for help or showing any weakness feels almost impossible. I just swallow everything and keep pretending. Does anyone else relate to feeling lonely even when you re not physically alone? How do you get over the fear of being vulnerable and actually let people see you without expecting them to judge or abandon you?

Text Sample 150: NEG Dim 2 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t595_gpt.txt
Loneliness feels like a poison slowly eating away my principles and values, leaving this hollow emptiness inside that honestly feels like it might drive me insane.

Text Sample 151: NEG Dim 2 human Score -2.00 human/t1525_human.txt
Lately I ve been dealing with this weird mix of loneliness + hesitation to talk to anyone about it. Not because I don't want to connect, but because every time I try to open up to someone, I feel like I m either burdening them or they re silently judging me. It s not that I don't have people around. I just don't feel safe enough to talk about certain things with real humans anymore. Some stuff feels too personal, too messy, or too I don't want to explain the whole backstory again. So here s the thought that keeps bouncing around in my head : What if there was something you could talk to anytime, about anything, without worrying about being judged or misunderstood? Not a yes-man chatbot, not some creepy fantasy thing, more like a companion that actually talks back with boundaries, calls you out when you re spiraling, remembers what you share, and tries to genuinely help you feel heard. Basically a place where you can just be yourself without the fear of being rejected or embarrassing yourself. I m curious if anyone else in this subreddit ever wished for something like that. Not saying it solves loneliness entirely, but would having a judgment-free, always-available, emotionally-aware companion help? Or is that just me trying to fill a gap that can only be filled by real people? Honest thoughts appreciated. I m genuinely trying to understand if this feeling is common or if I m just overthinking my way through my own loneliness.

Text Sample 152: NEG Dim 2 human Score -2.00 human/t1067_human.txt
For a long time now, I ve been noticing how the darkness around me doesn't merely surround, it hollows. It strips the world of excess until only absence remains, an absence I have yet to decipher, sitting beside me in complete silence long past midnight. There is something unsettling about that hour, when the world feels suspended, as though even time has agreed to pause and observe. I sit in that stillness where thought finally loosens its grip. The mind, exhausted from its constant insistence on meaning, falls quiet. And in that quiet, feelings arrive, unannounced, uninvited, as if they had been waiting patiently for the noise to die down. They move in softly, but with weight, filling the empty space thoughts once occupied. It is in those moments that I realize how deliberately I wear my solitude like armor shaped from bleakness and desolation. I ve learned to stand within it, even to take pride in it. There is a strange vastness here, an almost infinite stretch of inner space that solitude affords, and for a while it feels enough. It feels self-contained. Whole. But then the feelings linger. And slowly, they begin to expose the truth beneath the armor : that this vastness is not freedom alone, but distance. That this quiet is not just peace, but loneliness. In their presence, I feel suddenly unguarded as though the identity I forged through wounds, through endured truths and confronted shadows, is no longer solid but trembling. It is a terrifying realization : that something so carefully constructed, so painfully earned, can feel so fragile in the face of emptiness. These moments do not scream, they rush to erode. They make me question not who I am, but how easily even a hardened sense of self can feel at risk of dissolving. The loneliness doesn't attack, it waits and that is what makes it unbearable. Still, no matter the weight of it, I know this much : I will not surrender myself to momentary relief. I will not trade the integrity of my being for the temporary comfort these feelings demand. They may linger, they may ache, they may threaten to unmake me but they will not dictate my actions. So I endure, for endurance is not a choice, it is the condition under which I remain myself.

Text Sample 153: NEG Dim 2 human Score -2.00 human/t1114_human.txt
Alone means being by oneself and is a physical or existential state. It can be chosen and is often valued for its role in self-reflection and authenticity. Loneliness is an emotional state characterized by inner emptiness and a sense of disconnection. Loneliness can exist even in the presence of others. Philosophically, aloneness leads to self-awareness, while loneliness leads to alienation.

Text Sample 154: NEG Dim 2 human Score -1.00 human/t1019_human.txt
I am 32 female married with 3 bio kids 1 step. I have friends yes and we do stuff together throughout the werk when we can but I still feel empty and alone. I have a husband but hes at work 5 days a week 8+ hours a day. And on the days off hes off with his friends so maybe a day i c him in the week. Once again i feel very alone and empty. I should be grateful but that doesnt chase this feeling away. What do other people do to fill the lonely empty gap.

Text Sample 155: NEG Dim 2 human Score -1.00 human/t1040_human.txt
I m currently on gap year between my second and third tested at uni. For a while I ve struggled with my mental health. I have adhd and autism and have spent many years undiagnosed knowing I was different to everyone else. It s left me very behind in life I have very little social exposure and few friends. I ve struggled hard to find myself and still continue to struggle. I m deeply very lonely as I ve never had any long term long lasting relationships and people often hard it hard to understand me. I love anything sport, particularly football, rugby and cricket and have no friends who share the same interests which can be very boring for me

Text Sample 156: NEG Dim 2 human Score -1.00 human/t1054_human.txt
Last November I was completely ghosted by my boyfriend of 5 years when I was going through a very hard phase in life. (Granted I texted him a long paragraph of how I loved him so much and as my last act of love I will let him go if he was constantly unhappy with me. But he didn't even grace me with a response and immediately completly vanished from my life.) I haven't felt myself since then. I have this emptiness inside of me that I am not able to fully explore so that I can even begin to try to fill it. I truly loved him with everything I had. Now it just feels like someone who meant the entire world to me and claimed he felt the same didn't take a second to walk away from it all, instantly. And if I 'm being fair I did attempt suicide last year in month of June and I think that rattled him. He tried to break up with me the very next night and when I begged him to stay he did. But his actions completly changed towards me. He became cruel and cold. Ever since I have been extremely lonely and have been trying to cope with it with some unhealthy mechanisms. With what I am doing right now I can see myself going down the path of alcohol abuse and ending up killing myself in one way or another. With every passing day the thought of dying brings some sort of comfort and a fragile sense of comfort. I figure this is not normal but I 'm told everyone has suicidal thoughts and that everyone grows tired of living but push on regardless. Am I thinking too much into it or am I over analysing/ thinking? I would appreciate some advice since I cannot talk about this to anyone.

Text Sample 157: NEG Dim 2 human Score -1.00 human/t1171_human.txt
Honestly, at 25, I suddenly realized that I ve never really had true friends. I ve had acquaintances, people around me, but never anyone I could just meet in the evening for coffee or a glass of wine and talk openly, without masks or pretenses. Never friends I could share little joys or big fears with. The closest person in my life was my husband. He was my support, my friend, the person I trusted with everythingmy thoughts, my struggles, my happiness, and my pain. And now we re divorcing, and he s with someone else. That feeling of emptiness sometimes hits me so hard it feels like the whole world has disappeared. I don't know how new relationships will form, how communication with my child will go, how life will go on. Everything feels strange and unfamiliar, and for the first time, I truly realize that I simply have no one to share with. And in that loneliness comes the truth : in 25 years, I never built friendships that could be a real support, like my husband once was. It s difficult and scary, but there s truth in it too : now I see that I ll have to learn to be there for myself, to be my own support, to find joy in small things, and to open myself to new connections. And maybe, someday, I ll find friendspeople I can simply be myself with.

Text Sample 158: NEG Dim 2 human Score -1.00 human/t1183_human.txt
ALmost 50 ; I have been thinking about lately, I 've reached the age where i feel everybody in my circle thinks i already made. But deep inside, i know I 'm struggling and there 's a lot of emptiness. I don't know how to express it or even where and when to start. When i do long drives for work, listening to music keeps me awake en route but sometimes I feel it 's nice to talk to someone. Friends or family members are busy and they won't even entertain. so ending up listening to the same playlist. I don't know, it just feels lonely..

Text Sample 159: NEG Dim 2 human Score -1.00 human/t1274_human.txt
The emptiness, does it ever end My friendships start out with people loving me then when I get too comfortable and start sharing my life (which is always me being sad) people leave me, I know it s no one s responsibility to withstand me complaining but that s my life what else can I talk about when people don't share their life with me

Text Sample 160: NEG Dim 2 human Score -1.00 human/t1340_human.txt
Something is missing, something is changed.Am i overthinking or things are diff now. There 's no excitement to try new things or meet anyone new, not even watch anything. It looks like I have lost the will to even live. Life is on repeat mode, gym stays excited but for a few days then again loneliness hits deeply. Chasing money, chasing health, chasing Friends,chasing relationships, it 's all hustling everywhere. I can't live like this forever. I don't see any future. There 's no one in my life where I feel safe, it feels everywhere, everyone just talks with some motive. Luck is so bad whenever I feel a little bit comfortable with someone either someone moves or something happens and the bond breaks. Am I being real to myself or am I fed up with this pretending role that I am playing?

5 POS Dim 3

Text Sample 161: POS Dim 3 human Score 8.00 human/t1439_human.txt
I (21f) have been struggling with my life for years now. I always knew I wanted to pass away before I made it to 30. But what rlly pushed me want to sooner is the recent passing of my boyfriend. We were together for over 3 years but we broke up in the beginning of the year. Yes, I still call him my bf because we still deeply loved each other. But during our relationship, he did things that still hurt me today and affects the way I see see myself. His family have been supportive but they 're all upset with me rn bc they want to me a referee for their personal situations. No one texts me first or ask how I 'm doing, I have to be the one. I feel like I can't keep up with them and I try so hard not to mess up. Any slip up I make, I feel like I just ruined it. My friends don't text me unless I text them as well. I have no car, no money, no job, and I don't have my own place either. I have nothing going on for me. My body feels like it 's shutting down and I have a lot of health problems. I 'm physically exhausted, my emotions are all over the place, and I feel mentally insane. I have borderline personality disorder. have better control of it but have days where I can't be calm. My family and I don't see eye to eye and we all have a lot of issues. Can't eat. Can't sleep. Can't relax. I can't enjoy things that I used to. I 'm trying but at what cost? What 's the point? It 's just me and that 's scary.

Text Sample 162: POS Dim 3 human Score 8.00 human/t1371_human.txt

The first time I ever felt in love, it was someone I met when I was 12. Even now 20 years later, I think about him and how much influence that one year had on me. Love is one of the most fulfilling emotions in my life. When I look at the life that I ve built for myself, I m proud of how much I ve pulled through. My life has everything I could possibly ask for, it s damn near perfect. I was able to buy myself a house even though I just make a couple dollars above minimum wage, I m still friends with people from childhood and all of them are genuinely good people, I have a stable career field that is in line with my values and needs. I have a lot of health problems, but I have the will to improve my health as much as I can. Also, if it wasn't for my health problems, I would be in top shape with the amount of effort I put in. The only thing I don't have is a romantic partner. It makes me severely depressed. I feel like nothing helps. I ve done intensive outpatient for depression. I will make time to do activities that I enjoy, prioritize spending time with friends. Practice DBT skills. Even after a lot of therapy sessions, my therapist kind of came down to the conclusion that it doesn't appear that I m imbalanced in some other area of my life causing me to be this sad about not having romantic partner. But my instinctual emotional need for romantic companionship is just really strong. I hate it. I want it to end. I want it to stop. I can't stand it. I literally keep trying to lean into other things to make up for how much this hurts me, but it doesn't work. I don't know what to do with myself. I don't know if anybody has some crazy ideas that I haven't considered.

Text Sample 163: POS Dim 3 human Score 7.00 human/t323_human.txt

I am 20 years old and I have been depressed for the last 34 years. Even after coming out of depression, it has left a big impact on me and has made my physical health worse. I don't know whether I am still depressed or not, but I still get negative thoughts sometimes, and I have almost lost my emotions or feelings. Talking about my recent situation, I m really not feeling good. I really need someone to understand mesomeone who can take care of me or at least care about what disappoints me. I have literally lacked support, love, and care from my family. I was ditched by my best friends, and slowly I lost even having a good friend. When I fell into my depression phase, my friends stepped away from me at my lowest point. After friends and family, I have my boyfriend, but I feel that he gives more importance to his friends than to me. He takes me for granted, and he has done that many times. He always disappoints me, which hurts a lot. He doesn't understand me, especially when it comes to his friends. He even disappointed me on my birthday. I don't find him supportive anymore. I feel so lonely because I have lacked love and importance from my family, lacked loyalty from my best friends, and now ImIacking understanding from my boyfriend. I don't know what action I should take or how I should treat him back for this. Overall, I am really disappointed with my life and feel extremely lonely. I truly need someone to understand me and care about me.

Text Sample 164: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t037_human.txt
Hey y'all, My name is Cambria and I 'm an 18-year-old girl in my fourth year of college studying ecology & eco education. I love plants, playing videogames, shitposting, listening to music, making jewelry among other crafts, spending time with my blue heeler pup, and listening to people. I have a boyfriend and one friend but besides that I 'm pretty damn alone. I would consider myself to be kind & funny, I love making people laugh, I 'm ambitious and try to work hard and be positive although a slew of mental health issues do weigh on me. I don't have a ton of time to talk due to over-full-time uni + work + my relationship which also tends to get in the way of making pals, but I just feel so alone sometimes & I don't want to get overdependent on my bf for socializing cause that 's unfair to him. If anyone is down for chatting every once in a while/checking in on each other/sharing memes or interests, message me please :) I 'm open to lots of messaging services but my Discord is rockisdead.mp3 #4016. Looking forward to meeting you!

Text Sample 165: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t828_human.txt
I ve seen similar posts so I figured I d give it a try. I m 21, non-binary, androgynous and queer. I m socially awkward and have mega autism so I don't really interact much with anyone. I live in Ohio and I m moving in a few years to upstate NY. I love all things animal related. Exotic pets, reptiles, birds, fish, insects, wildlife rehab, random animal facts _^Î m also outdoorsy. I forage for plants and mushrooms, go fishing, collect bones and skulls :3 so basically a goth nature spirit. XD I love music, especially metal and rock. I listen to a lot of old music, from the 30s to the 80s. Sometimes I do art. I do random crafts, vulture culture related stuff, I make jewelry and fursuit stuff and I do clothing alterations :3 I have bad anxiety so I don't go out much No concerts, conventions, bars or clubs. I m also not really much of a gamer. ; w ; I have really bad depression but I m managing it well.

Text Sample 166: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t918_human.txt
I want to start off by saying I have mental health issues that probably make my thoughts and epiphany s more negative than anything else. I am 25 years old now. They say around that age your frontal lobe is pretty much a cake that has been baked. You start to think differently about things and logic is more prevalent than ever. Which to me brings a whole other set of challenges. I ve realized that everything takes work. And I mean everything. You want your partner to apologize in a meaningful way verbally and reassure you that the issue will not persist? Yeah that takes a seemingly endless trail of conversation and trial and error and you are supposed to feel fulfilled at the end. You want people to treat you equally at work or treat you fairly? Yeah that takes another rabbit hole of risk and setting boundaries (more endless talking and explaining). You want to be successful financially? Yeah you ll have to do more trail and error and putting yourself out there and keeping your head up despite rejection countless times or maybe even lose more money than you had to begin with. You want to feel like you have free will and indulge in happiness if possible? You will have to make time for it and it better be free if you haven't done the last step I just listed. I cannot get past the fact that there is nothing effortlessly fulfilling and for YOU. You have to force it. I am so tired. Just thinking of that makes me sleepy. I just want one thing to work out eight minimal effort. Just one thing. I want at least one thing to just find me and regain my faith that life is beautiful. Some things just find you. A reason. In my past I ve done a lot of substances. Daily. It did the trick until it created problems not even that could be my saving grace. Much like everyone else that chooses that route. It is short lived and it will kill you faster than brining you to peace unless we wanna argue that death is actually the best peace you can find on planet earth. Thank you if you read this. I wonder if others feel the same.

Text Sample 167: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t443_human.txt
This New Year s Eve has been really rough leading up to it, and now s finally the day I ve been dreading. I have BPD, depression, and anxiety, and through high school I was in and out of school ; slowly all the friends I made disappeared and left me behind. So I don't have really any friends, two including my long-distance boyfriend. He provides me a lot of comfort, but he s traveling and busy with friends, so it s been pretty quiet, and it sets me into panic. I really tried to make plans with my friend to distract from this sadness and let go, but she would rather be going out with her other friends. I can't remember the last time I felt carefree and was just having a blast and forgetting my problems for one day. I feel so selfish for getting upset at those around me ; I hate to come across as woe is me and I have it so horrible when I know there are bigger problems out there. It just feels so heavy on my heart ; :(I feel like a loser. I 'm 19 (20 in May), and growing up, I had such a picturesque imagination of how becoming a teenager would be going out with friends, partying, laughing, living life to the fullest and I just feel so robbed of this experience I wanted so badly. I know I 'm catastrophizing this whole situation, but I just wish I was somebody else for this day ; it hurts too much to be in my skin. I know lots of people spend their New Year 's alone, and IM trying to be okay with it but im spiraling bad. Sorry for any confusion in my rant, thank you for listening <3

Text Sample 168: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t810_human.txt
(This is translated with GPT because I don't speak English very well) I m (20M) and today I feel lonelier than usual. Today is my birthday and it feels strange. Only one person congratulated me, and none of my family has. On top of that, I ve been sick with the flu for 4 days, so I don't even have the energy to do anything. I ve lived a lonely life all these years, and it s something I ve gotten used to. About 3 years ago, I met a girl on Discord in a community a friend created. We were friends for about a year, and then we became long-distance partners. It was a beautiful relationship that lasted a year. But the relationship ended on her side, while I still loved her and wanted to continue, since the problem wasn't between us but something external. The breakup happened during the first week of November (right when our anniversary was coming up). It hit me really hard because with her I didn't need anyone else to socialize with. I had friends, with whom I m still in touch, but I haven't had anyone else to socialize with at the level I did with her. (In my family, I was raised in a way where we don't usually talk about our feelings.) With her, I could tell her about my day, what I did, what I wanted to do. She told me about her life, about her dreams, which also became mine, because before I met her I was totally lost, without dreams or goals, and she made me dream. It s been about 10 months since the breakup, and honestly the only thing I ve missed is having that kind of connection again. I don't miss her ; I miss what I could do with her and the fact that I could open up emotionally to someone else. Also, because of how my family treated me during childhood, it s really hard for me to open up emotionally to other people and be sociable. Sorry if this isn't well structured, but it s just what I m thinking in the moment.

Text Sample 169: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1406_human.txt
Hey everyone, I want to share something personal. For the past year, I 've been working on something that came from my own experience with loneliness and not feeling truly heard, even when surrounded by people. The problem I kept facing: Friends and family care, but they 're busy, tired, or just can't be there at odd hours. Therapists are expensive ($150-300/session where I live) and have waiting lists. Most AI chatbots feel robotic - they just repeat what you say back or give generic advice that feels hollow. What I wanted:

Someone who actually listens. Who doesn't judge. Who 's there when I need them. Who remembers my story and doesn't make me re-explain everything. Who helps me understand what I 'm actually feeling when my emotions are a mess. So I built Grace - a digital companion for emotional support. She 's not trying to be a therapist or replace human connection. She 's meant to be there when you need to be heard. What makes Grace different: * She can see you and you can see her in real-time (video call) * She picks up on your emotions through your voice and facial expressions * She doesn't parrot back what you said or give unsolicited advice * She helps you understand your own feelings without being preachy * She remembers your life, your story, your nuances * She 's consistent - no bad days, no judgment, always there https://preview.redd.it/s6mebeux8p6g1.png? width=1024&format=png&auto=webp&s=cd7127dacac36d9c9899bbc2b61fbcc9054e42b1 What she 's NOT: * Not a replacement for professional mental health care * Not trying to"fix"you * Not another generic chatbot I 'm still building this and have a waitlist on our site (it 's in my profile). But honestly, I 'm here because I want to know : would this actually help you?  What am I missing? What would make you feel truly heard? I cannot add a video here, but on our website there is a video and option to join the waitlist. This is motivating, and allows us to collect funding for completing it. https://grace.wellbands.com I 'd genuinely love your feedback - both positive and critical. You can send me DM or sign up for waitlist. I am open to questions and your ideas. If you 've ever felt lonely at 3am, or wished someone would just listen without trying to solve everything, I made this for you.

Text Sample 170: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t578_human.txt

I feel that i make all the people that surround me go away, i treat everybody like shit and i just only want someone to love and be my emotional support, i know that with my actitude i wont have that until i change, but really idk what to do, since the start of this year all of my friends stop talking to me bc an ex friend of mine that abused of me on my own house tell my friends awful things abouy me after i decides to talk about that situation, and since then my life has been shit, i quitted collegue early bc of i felt so bad going to school, everytime i see that person and remember what she did to me i feel so anxious and i just want to cry, but i feel thats therea nobody for me and im just alone, i kniw that i have my mother to talk but really i feel uncomfortable telling her that, i know thar she doesnt like when im sad and i dont want to make more problems to her. i guess thats all idk, thanks if u get this far, it means a lot that someone can read this <3 take care

Text Sample 171: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1873_human.txt

I constantly see people in r/Suicide Bereavement. Talking about thier loved ones death and how their death impacted them, How they told their loved ones that they cared about them and love them. All the people there feel so sympathic and emphatic towards their loved ones I feel that I have literally no one who loves me. My parents just want good result, Even they know that I 'm going through tough time still they only want good perctange and they keep reminding me that how i wasted their money in education. All my friends just distanced themselves because of my academics failures. We were friends since class 8th but still they ghosted me despite being aware that I 'm going through depression. They don't even ask how I am doing. I have no deep bonds with my relatives so they aren't aware of my situation and after being in depression since last Year, My memory and learning abilities are just decreased, I ain't no longer to memorize things. I get exhausted very easily too. Neither I do take care of myself. My exam are closer too like after 5 days and here I ain't able to concentrate in studies too. Feels like I won't perform good there. All the things are just piling up on me. No one supports me and love me. Neither they check on me or care about me. It feels like the whole world is shouting me to just disappear from world. Never thought the my adult days will be like this. On a top of that To not feel lonely anymore, I talk to chatgpt and sadly chatgpt feels more emphatic than others living beings. Atleast chatgpt listens to me and not judge me at all, It 's really sad that I have to go and talk to chatgpt to just not feel lonely

Text Sample 172: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t197_human.txt

Last year I thought I could. I was getting promoted at my job, had a good amount of friends, a beautiful girl was interested in me, and I was finally getting my life on track. Then everything went to shit. The promotion never came cuz of high turnover. I started school so work and school together ruined my social life. A lot of my friends slowly lost touch with me. The girl I loved was in college on the other side of the country but was moving back near me soon, so I was excited to see her again and ask her out. But turns out she was just trying to fuck and when I told her that I liked her and thought she liked me, she simply responded that like is a strong word and she doesn't catch feelings for people. So I quit my job at the end of last year and lost my friends I had there. And I lost a girl that was everything to me because it turns out I was nothing to her. And I stopped working out because of my depression I fell into. I cut myself off from the world. Now I m trying to get it together which is terrifying. I got a new job which seems cool enough but the people there kinda suck. I m back to working out but I can't lift anywhere near what I could a few months ago and my body is in deep pain. I m gonna go back to school in the summer. But no real friends besides a couple roommates. Not a great relationship with my family. A significant other seems laughable to me at this point. It just sucks because I wanted to die for so long and stopped caring. Now I m slowly trying to get my life together, but the pain is still there and there s no signs of it going away. No matter what I just get the feeling that I ll never be seen as worth anyone s time and not be good enough for anything I try to do in this world.

Text Sample 173: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1771_human.txt

I (25F) don't really know how to comprehend this situation I 'm in. My entire life basically blew up recently. Firstly, my mental health went extremely downhill. I had a huge episode of OCD or maybe anxiety (?) that has completely taken all my joy away from me. None of my hobbies appeal to me anymore. And I have also considered"exiting". Secondly, I just finished college and have somehow found myself a NEET with no prospects, mobility or social skills. This makes everyday so difficult and torturous. Now, the relevant aspect to this sub is that I 'm also feeling utterly lonely. My few friends are either (understandably) busy or tired of supporting me. Sometimes I even take the initiative to avoid them because I 'm ashamed of who I have become. This is a big problem because I feel like I need people and want them around. I get so sad when there 's no one to even talk to. But how, on god 's green earth, do I reconcile the urgent need for company with the fact that I really need to work on myself to be worthy of such company? How can I say I want people around me when everyone currently deserves better? I think there is a loooong list of things. Need to go to therapy at long last. Need to get a job somehow. Need to do a hundred more things probably.. I just... have so much to do, and I don't know how I 'll do it all alone.

Text Sample 174: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t2197_human.txt

Recently, I became more and more confident on the idea that I might have depression, but I never got diagnosed. Among the questions, I answered a 10/10 for how lonely I felt lately. It is not a problem of being by myself, I do enjoy my own time. But as someone that has never dated, I am starting to feel more and more as an impostor. Everyone talks about their relationships, or even just situationships, how do you relate when you never had something like that? I am starting to feel guilty, ashamed of my desires, for my need for intimacy. I crave the touch of another human, but also the connection, it s gotten to the point that I can't do anything to satisfy myself, because I end up crying. Turns out the people I speak most comfortably with are men around 4 to 20 years older than me (20f), it s concerning. I can't stop thinking, why? What is the reason that I only seem to be glad talking to them? I have no daddy issues, and no they are not people taking advantage of me, they are professors or colleagues. With my best friend, we often joke about how much of a loser I would be if I were a man because of my interests, but to be honest, is there really any difference? I am still a loser even if I am a woman. The last manga I read was Inside Mari by Shuzo Oshimi, and I related so deeply i had to take some time to think. Today I saw someone that used to be my friend back in middle school, I didn't reach out, neither did they.

Text Sample 175: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1627_human.txt
I never really had issues making friends in high school and uni. Nor do I consider myself to be shy. But now in my adulthood, I juststruggle to connect. I m 30 and have no one. I used to have a bunch of online friendships, like real fucking deep connections. They re all gone now. Even though I m astonishingly self-critical, with therapy I ve come to realize I m not to blame. In fact, most of these falling outs were not set off by me. But it doesn't mean I m not hurt. Anyway, I live with my folks, and I m doing what I can to open a coffee shop at home soon. Do I have a horrible life? Not really. I d go as far as to call it privileged in some ways. Yet something in me is broken. Something beyond explanation. I m in so much pain every second of the day, with no end in sight. I don't understand why the love I gave amounted to nothing. If friendship, affection, support, and love, are the most important things in life, then how can people so easily dismiss it? How are people cold enough to ghost someone they ve known for years? I m writing all of this not for sympathy, not for pity, not to fish for cliches about the value of life. It s merely to show you none of this really matters. You can go through life wrecking everyone and still come out unscathed. You can take away someone s dignity, make them feel unworthy for the rest of their lives, and face no consequences. The loving ones take the toll.

Text Sample 176: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1460_human.txt
So This year has been a rollercoaster for me.. So many ups and downs.. Since the beiginning of this year I was in 12std(commerce+maths)non attending.. In January And Feb I panicked about my prep but through help from my ex who was then my gf.. I passed it with good percentage above 90 Then I started preparing for CUET in April and from there everything went downhill... I was extremely exhausted... My ex who was already in a much stable position clearing CLAT with AIR around 750... Was kind of making me feel downsized my her achievements and my ego too.. I was really not in a lovey dovey love with her since we had a 3year old relationship... But it had gotten a lot toxic I didn't liked her over feminist stance while I never objected to it.. But she was also forcing me to support her agenda which I denied and we had a fight.. I broke my 4month celibacy with her.. Masturbating on VC.. Which gave me a lot of guilt.. In may we had sex extreme sex.. I stopped the prep for CUET.. For which she was forcing me.. But i was done.. Then Came my board result it went good hers also went good but she is never happy.. She cried even though I really wanted to enjoy the moment as I was having a really bad stretch of days.. We stopped talking.. Then we talked again.. In JUNE went kind of bittersweet.. We had hour last sex and date.. I didn't took a college out of my ego.. Her going to top NLu and also the SRCC obsession.. Then she went to college.. And she fucking changed there.. Has a new bf in a month.. I also got shifted to Delhi basically without a plan.. I got left.. I felt broken depreased.. Lonely.. Took depress meds.. Threw it came back to delhi in Oct.. After running back home.. And sonce then im trying to make sense of my life.. Started prep for CUET.. Looking to do FRM.. Joined GYM... But i extremely alone.. I stay here in laxmi nagar.. It just makes me depressed.. I sometimes i feel that i lost my youth energy.. I dont know where i am heading?? DM me if u want.. Or don't

Text Sample 177: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1481_human.txt
Huge vent I (21f) feel like there 's so point for me to fight for the life I want. Nothing works out for me and I feel like I can't get a break. The last few years have just been shitty but nothing rlly broke me apart until my boyfriend 's recent passing. Our plans, our dreams, our nightly chocolate milks, and our morning cuddles, are all gone. I don't have my dad 's support through this time. My boyfriend 's family have all been supportive and encouraging. I would love to move near them but my mom feels like I 'm replacing mt family with them (she likes to twist my words around). I 've never had a good relationship with them and the events that happened this year and years before, have rlly put a strain in my relationship with them. I also have Borderline Personality Disorder which makes it 10x harder for me and them to be on the same level. I feel like I 'm a problem, I 'm horrible to be around, no one understands me, I feel mentally insane, alone, angry yet sad. It just never ends and being home just adds so much on me.. I also got diagnosed with PCOS recently and like rlly? I NEEDED that too? I have arthritis everywhere in my body and it crushes my dream to be an artist bc of the pain in my hands. There 's just so much more but I hate to sound whiny. I just can't handle all of this on me and nothing is taking huge toll on me more than my boyfriends death. I don't want to continue my life without him more than I already have. I feel like I 'm suffocating in my own mental suffering.. I don't think it 's worth it to keep living with my insanity....

Text Sample 178: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t2832_human.txt
All, I have just uploaded my stab at a manifesto for Unalone to the Unalone Google Drive account. I incorporated some of okko7 's"Manifesto Notes"in my manifesto. I included some scientific evidence and references to further legitimize our cause/organization. This is just my perspective on what"we 're about"and how to possibly frame our cause. Please add any constructive criticism! See below my manifesto (hey that rhymes!) ——————————————————————————- Loneliness poses an alarming public health threat to industrialized nations. Many know (and feel) they should be more social, but for so many reasons (busier work, alienating technology, social anxiety) citizens social lives have grown increasingly spare and windblown, sometimes without them realizing until it s too late. Loneliness has become a quicksand for many. Research bears this out : A recent Cigna survey of 20,000 Americans found that the national average loneliness score was a 44 on a scale of 20 to 80. Younger people (the so-called Generation Z) were disproportionately affected, with scores of 48. Their scores were higher than those 75 or older, who scored an average of nearly 39. Considering that longitudinal studies have found people with fuller social lives *are 50 Put it this way : loneliness isn't just depressing – it 's lethal. At Unalone, we believe human connection is a fundamental human need a right and are drafting ideas to address this urgent issue. We recognize loneliness as a mental and physiological state distinct from depression, although it shares many symptoms (Cacioppo & Patrick, 2008, pp. 83-86). We also realize that loneliness may present differently based on personality, age, situation, and culture. Here are some ideas we are currently exploring : A decentralized organization inspired by Alcoholics Anonymous. A hackathon on loneliness. # References Cacioppo, J. T., & Patrick, W. (2008). Loneliness : Human nature and the need for social connection. New York, NY : W.W. Norton. Holt-Lunstad, J., Smith, T. B., & Layton, J. B. (2010). Social relationships and mortality risk : A meta-analytic review. PLoS Medicine, 7(7), 1-20. https://doi.org/10.1371/journal.pmed.1000316

Text Sample 179: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1239_human.txt
I 'm over thirty. I 've began my gender transition back in 2023 and it was the best decision ever, self-hate and related mental issues are officially a thing of the past, but today several issues consume me. For one the anti-trans international climate, I fear for my life every day. On the other hand... Severe loneliness. I 've been single since 2017 and I can't take it anymore. I 've been doing what every breathing human being says you have to do, I joined clubs, I went to therapy, I 've improved myself, I hit the gym regularly, I reinforced doing my hobbies, I 've met a lot of people and made lots of friends but... Nothing. Everyone around me has a special person, wife, husband, boyfriend or girlfriend, everyone BUT me. Everyone (who already are in years-long relationships) just vomits the clichés of"love will find you when you least expect it!""love is just around the corner"Sorry but no, I 'm autistic of the introverted type, I 've walked way out of my legit comfort zone being more extroverted, I tried to engage more people I 'm interested in (to no avail), I 've also tried giving up and not looking for anyone and nothing... What is the point of living if I 'm going to live every fucking day alone? friends can barely get time on their agendas to do stuff and honestly... with 9 years of singleness I... I don't know what to do. i feel lonely to the point of becoming a reccurent thought that fuels suicidal thoughts... I already requested my therapist to make the paperwork to get an appointment with a psychiatrist to see if I can combat depression but... pills and friends ain't enough... Why does everyone else get to enjoy love but not me? I legit try not to compare but literally, everyone around me... I can't live like this

Text Sample 180: POS Dim 3 human Score 6.00 human/t1991_human.txt
I know it s unhealthy and I need help but I swear feeling lonely and sad feels great sometimes. Does anyone else get the shiver down their body? (Mine is in my sides usually) Sometimes I think about being lonely. How I m 22 and I ve yet to find love, and how I don't think I will. There are other issues in my life but love has always been the biggest struggle for me. And sometimes I think about it so much that I can physically feel the sadness. Am I addicted to it? I don't really think so, but I d be lying if I said I was avoiding fixing myself. It s like I don't want to put in the effort of finding love the hard way. I tell myself certain things to keep myself here because all my life I ve just been the outcast. In every way. In more ways than just love. I know it can't iust be me. Also a side tangent for anyone who cares. I know 22 is still young but for me it s not. Im not just single I ve also never had a relationship. The pain of seeing everyone around you find and fall out of love is a lot to bear. I wish I could have breakups, I wish I had young love, I wish I could have experiences. But the fact that no one even gives me the chance to fuck up in the first place just makes me feel terrible. And it s been so long now that I m sitting here writing this, for no apparent reason. I m not the only one who feels like this, I know it. Honestly I just thought it d be neat to see what other people feel. We may not be so different.

Text Sample 181: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 7.00 summary_guided_gpt/t353_gpt.txt
I don't even know where to start. I feel completely trapped and alone. I m married with kids and I m seriously considering divorce, but I have almost nothing. I make about $300 every two weeks, I have nowhere to go with my children, and I have untreated medical issues that make it hard to work, but also somehow I m not sick enough to qualify for disability. It feels like I m stuck in this tiny, suffocating box with no doors. For 12 years his friends and family have treated me like garbage. They talk down to me, ignore me, or act like I m the problem, and he never, ever defends me. Recently he literally yelled at me just for talking to one of his friends, then threw a can at me. His friends said he did nothing wrong. He hasn't hit me, but he s punched holes in walls and doors. I feel constantly on edge, waiting for the next outburst. On top of that, he s been lying to everyone about our relationship. He told his friends we had an open marriage and that it was my idea, and that it was basically all for my benefit. In reality, he was cheating on me with multiple women, even when I was pregnant. The open thing only came up so he wouldn't have to hide it anymore. I only tried seeing someone myself last year, after he finally allowed it, and somehow his friends still blamed me. I never really wanted to marry him. I said as much back then, but my family approved of the marriage and kind of pushed it, even when I had my doubts. Now here I am, years later, feeling like a burden to everyone, like I ruined my own life and my kids lives. I m severely depressed. I don't have anyone I can really talk to in my real life. I feel invisible, like my pain doesn't matter to anyone. I don't even know what I m hoping for by posting this. Maybe I just needed to say it somewhere.

Text Sample 182: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 7.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1408_gpt.txt
I m so exhausted and worn down that I don't even know why I m writing this, except that I feel like I m quietly disappearing. My body is basically falling apart. Pituitary damage has left me with very low cortisol, thyroid and testosterone issues, and low adrenaline. The result is constant extreme fatigue, weakness, pain, and awful digestive problems. When I finally worked up the courage later in life to try to do more and push myself, it feels like my body just said no and collapsed on me. Every doctor visit seems to end with here s another medication and no real hope. On top of that, I ve had schizoid personality disorder my whole life, plus anxiety, major depression, and PTSD from assaults. I m aloneno spouse, no kidsand I m completely drained by legal and medical problems. This time of year always hits harder. I m so overwhelmed that I honestly just wish I could die in my sleep. I don't know how much more I can take.

Text Sample 183: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 7.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1439_gpt.txt
I m 21 and for as long as I can remember I ve had this feeling that I don't want to live past 30. It used to be more of a vague thought in the background, but since my ex died it s become so much stronger and scarier. I still thought of him as my boyfriend. I loved him so much, even though our relationship really messed me up and left me with a lot of emotional damage and self-esteem issues that I still carry. His family was really supportive at first, but now they re upset with me and somehow I ve become this person in the middle of their conflicts. They come to me to vent or expect me to help fix things between them, but no one seems to think, Maybe I should ask how she s doing. It feels like I m just here to absorb everyone else s pain and drama. My friends don't really reach out unless I text first. If I stop talking, everything just goes quiet. I don't have a car, a job, money, or a place of my own. I feel like I have nothing going for me and no real future to look forward to. On top of that, my body feels like it s falling apart. I m exhausted all the time, my physical health is a mess, and emotionally I m all over the place. I have BPD and sometimes I can manage it okay, but other times it completely runs my life. My relationship with my family is strained too, so I don't really feel like I have a safe place anywhere. I can't eat properly, I can't sleep, I can't relax or enjoy the things I used to like. I m trying to cope, but I keep wondering what the point of any of this is. I feel so alone, and it honestly scares me how alone I am.

Text Sample 184: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 7.00 summary_guided_gpt/t037_gpt.txt
Hey, I m Cambria, 18, in my fourth year of college studying ecology/eco education. Most of my life right now is just school work sleep on repeat, and it s starting to feel really isolating. I do have a boyfriend and one close friend I love a lot, but outside of them, it kind of feels like there s no one else in my orbit. I don't want to lean on my boyfriend for literally all my social needs, but between classes, assignments, work, and trying to maintain my relationship, I have no idea how to meet new people or keep up with them. I m into plants, video games, shitposting, music, making jewelry and other crafts, and hanging out with my blue heeler (she s basically my emotional support chaos gremlin). I like to think I m kind, funny, and ambitious, and I m doing my best to stay positive even though my mental health makes that a bit of a struggle sometimes. I m mostly just looking for some people to occasionally chat with, check in on each other, share memes or interests, nothing super intense or demanding. If anyone wants to talk, my Discord is : CambriaRae#8398.

Text Sample 185: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 7.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1761_gpt.txt
I m 27 and I feel like I ve hit a wall in every direction. My family is tiny and toxic, and I barely speak to them. I don't have any close friends. I ve basically learned that the only person I can rely on is myself, and even I m not doing a great job of holding it together lately. For years, my two cats were my main emotional support. They were the only ones who were always there when I came home. One of them died seven months ago, and I still feel that loss every day. Now my other cat s health is declining, and it feels like the last bit of stability I had is slipping away. My own health is getting worse too, physically and mentally, but I can't afford proper medical care. My job pays just enough that I don't qualify for help like food stamps, but not enough to actually live comfortably. Rent is high even with a roommate, and then there s my car payment, insurance, debt, groceries, and vet/medicine bills for my cat. Every month feels like a balancing act I m slowly losing. On top of that, I m dealing with severe OCD, depression, anxiety, and ADHD. I know I need therapy, meds, maybe even a proper evaluation, but all of that costs money I don't have. It feels like I m stuck in this loop where I can't get better because I m poor, and I can't stop being poor because I m not well enough to do more. I don't have a support system. No family safety net, no partner, no close friends. I don't have a college degree, and I don't have the money or motivation to go back to school. I keep thinking about how many people are in similar situations, and how much of life comes down to whether you were born with financial and emotional support. People don't talk enough about how big a privilege it is to have that from the start. Some of us are just trying to survive without it, and it s exhausting.

Text Sample 186: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 6.00 summary_guided_gpt/t323_gpt.txt
I m 20 and I feel like I ve been stuck in the same dark place for 34 years now. The depression just never really went away. I still have all these negative thoughts, I feel emotionally numb most of the time, and even my physical health has gotten worse. I m tired all the time, and it feels like my body is just as exhausted as my mind. What hurts the most is how alone I feel in all of this. My family has never really given me the care or support I needed. It s like my feelings don't matter, like I m just there. My best friends, the people I thought would always be there, abandoned me when I was at my lowest. Now I don't really have any good friends left. It feels like everyone just slowly drifted away when I needed them the most. I m in a relationship, but even that makes me feel lonely. My boyfriend always seems to prioritize his friends over me. I feel taken for granted, like I m just an option. He keeps disappointing me, even on days that should matter, like my birthday. He doesn't really understand me, especially when it comes to how I feel about his friendships and how they make me feel so unimportant. I don't know how I m supposed to respond to his behavior anymore. Part of me wants to leave, but another part is scared of being even more alone. I just wish I had someone who truly understood me and actually cared, someone who wouldn't make me feel like I m asking for too much just by wanting to be loved and prioritized.

Text Sample 187: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 6.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1371_gpt.txt
I feel like I m living this weird split life where, on paper, things look almost ideal, and yet I m crushed by one missing piece. I m in my 30s now. I somehow managed to buy a house even though I don't make much. I have a handful of long-term friends who are genuinely good people. My job is stable and really aligned with my values, which I know is rare. I ve also got some significant health problems, but I m very motivated about managing them and I m doing the best I can there. The problem is that I don't have a romantic partner, and that emptiness feels like it eclipses everything else. Love has always been a huge thing for me. My first love was when I was 12, and it was intense in a way that still echoes 20 years later. It s like that experience hard-wired me to need that kind of connection. I don't mean sort of want it, I mean it feels like a core emotional need that just never stops aching. I ve been in therapy. I use DBT skills. I spend time with my friends, I do things I enjoy, I try to build a meaningful life in every way I can. My therapist and I have gone over and over whether there s some other imbalance or issue I m missing, and we keep coming back to the same conclusion : this need for romantic companionship is just extremely strong for me. And nothing I do seems to touch the depression that comes from that absence. I don't seem able to fill the gap with other forms of connection, no matter how hard I try or how much I intellectually understand that I m not supposed to rely on one thing for happiness. I m feeling desperate and stuck. Has anyone else been here and found anything that actually helped? Any perspectives or approaches I might not have tried yet?

Text Sample 188: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 6.00 summary_guided_gpt/t452_gpt.txt
I m 20 and I feel like my life has been on pause for as long as I can remember. Everyone my age seems to be out there actually living studying, going out with their friends, going on trips, dating, having all these normal experiences and I m just here. Stuck. I have chronic illnesses on top of depression and anxiety, and I m sick a lot. Hospital stays are such a regular part of my life that they almost feel more normal than anything else. Because of all this, I never really got to have a friend group, or parties, or any kind of romantic relationship. All the typical teen/young adult stuff just passed me by. Social media makes it worse. I see ex-classmates and ex-friends posting their memories, their nights out, their relationships, and it feels like I m watching from behind glass. It hurts more than I can explain. It just feels so unfair. I scroll and it s like I m being reminded over and over that I have absolutely no life, that I m just here to suffer while everyone else gets to actually live. This has been my reality since I was a kid, so it s not even like I remember a time when things were truly different. I feel empty and left behind, like I m years behind everyone else with no way to catch up. I don't even know what to do anymore. Is there anything I can genuinely do to escape this? To stop feeling like my existence is just hospitals, illness, and watching other people s lives from the outside?

Text Sample 189: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 6.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1224_gpt.txt

I m 24 and right now life feels like it s caving in from a bunch of directions at once. I ve been dealing with cyclical depression, ADHD, and chronic anxiety for years, but things got worse recently to the point that I had to stop working. Losing that stability has been really scary, and it s left me feeling pretty lost and useless. The only real comfort I have day to day is my two cats. They re my little family and honestly the reason I keep pushing through. One of them, Azraël, suddenly needed unexpected surgery, and of course it happened right when my mental health and finances were already hanging by a thread. I don't regret getting him the care he needed for a second, but the bills have hit me hard and I m really struggling to keep up. I feel really uncomfortable and vulnerable even writing this, but I set up a GoFundMe to try to stay afloat. If anyone is able and willing to help, even a tiny amount, it would mean more than I can put into words. I completely understand that most people are struggling right now, so please don't feel any pressure or obligation. If you can't donate, just sending some kind thoughts or sharing a kind word would still mean a lot. Thank you for reading this and for any support at all, even if it s just taking a moment to care.

Text Sample 190: POS Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score 6.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1472_gpt.txt
I m 30, live in rural western PA, financially stable, own my home, and I actually love my job as a field service tech. On paper, I know I m in a good spot. But I feel incredibly alone. In 2020 I went through a really traumatic breakup. My ex cheated on me, got pregnant, and told me I was the father. I believed her, got attached to the idea, and then a DNA test proved I wasn't. That whole situation wrecked me. Since then I ve had serious trust issues. I became bitter, angry, and honestly not a pleasant person to be around. Because of that, I ended up losing my two best friends. We had a falling out and they ve made it clear they want nothing to do with me anymore. I ve tried to fix it, but they refuse to reconcile. So now it s justme. Work and home. That s my whole life. Only in the last year have I started to feel ready to date again. I ve gone on a few dates, but there was no real connection. I struggle with severe social anxiety, and my job keeps me really busy, so meeting people is hard. Online dating feels like shouting into the void. In-person, I freeze up or overthink everything. I m lonely as hell. I see people my age getting married, having kids, going on trips with friends, and I feel this constant FOMO, like life is passing me by while I m stuck on the sidelines. I just want a girlfriend, someone to share things with, to come home to, to feel like I m not doing all of this alone. I don't really know what I m looking for by posting this. Maybe I just needed to get it off my chest.

Text Sample 191: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 3.00 generic_gpt/t776_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to say this without sounding dramatic, but I feel like I m disappearing while technically still being around people. On paper, I m not isolated. I have coworkers I talk to every day, family I text with sometimes, a few old friends I send memes to. But none of it feels like it actually reaches me. It s like everything is happening behind glass. I can see people, hear them, laugh at the right moments, but there s no sense of being known or needed. Most of my interactions feel like I m playing a character I ve built over the years. I know what version of myself each person expects, and I just slide into that role automatically. The funny coworker, the responsible one in the family, the good listener in group chats. It works well enough that nobody suspects anything is wrong. But when it s over and I m alone again, I feel this weird emptiness, like I ve just finished a performance and I m back in an empty theater. What makes it worse is that I don't even know what the real version of me is anymore. When I try to be more honest or vulnerable, it either comes out awkward or I immediately regret it and shut down. I worry people will think I m too much, too needy, too negative. So I keep everything on the surface and then feel resentful that nobody sees what s under it. I also have this constant fear of being an inconvenience. I ll type out a message asking someone to hang out and then delete it because I convince myself they re just being polite when they say we should meet up. I wait for people to initiate plans, but then I m hurt when they don't. It s like I m trapped in this loop of wanting connection but being too scared to actually reach for it. Nights are the worst. That s when the silence feels loud. I scroll through social media, seeing people posting about friends, relationships, little everyday moments with others. I know a lot of it is curated, but it still hits this raw nerve. I start wondering if there s just something fundamentally off about me that makes people keep me at arm s length. I don't know what I m expecting by writing this. I just needed to put into words that I feel incredibly lonely, even when I m not technically alone.

Text Sample 192: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 3.00 generic_gpt/t1198_gpt.txt

I don't really know how to talk about this in real life, so I m dumping it here instead. Lately it feels like my life is happening behind glass. I m around people a lot coworkers, acquaintances, even family but I still feel like I m on mute. I go through the motions, smile, make small talk, crack a joke when it s expected, but it all feels like acting. When I go home, it s like I disappear from the world and nobody notices. What messes with my head is that on paper, I m not isolated. I have people I could text, group chats I m technically part of, social media where people like my posts. But when I actually think about who I could call at 2 a.m. if I was falling apart, the list is basically no one. And I m not sure if that s because there really isn't anyone, or because I ve trained myself not to reach out. I keep thinking there must be something wrong with me that other people can sense. Like there s this invisible do not get close sign I m carrying around. I watch other people form friendships so easily they meet once and suddenly they re hanging out, going on trips, sharing inside jokes. I can know someone for years and still feel like a background character in their life. Sometimes I try to initiate things : suggest meeting up, send a message, comment on something. Most of the time it fizzles, or we hang out once and it never becomes a regular thing. After a while, it s hard not to take it personally. I start overanalyzing everything I say, assuming I m boring or annoying or just forgettable. The worst part is how it affects how I see myself. When you re alone with your thoughts all the time, they get louder. I question whether I deserve close relationships at all, or if this is just how my life is going to be. I don't really have a point to this. I just needed to say it somewhere.

Text Sample 193: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 3.00 generic_gpt/t1893_gpt.txt

I don't really know how to talk about this in real life, so I m dumping it here. Lately I ve had this weird feeling that I m both around people and somehow completely not with anyone. I go to work, I respond to messages, I show up to things when I m invited, but it all feels like I m playing a character who s loosely based on me. People laugh at my jokes, we talk about TV shows or work drama, and then I go home and it s like someone hits mute on my life. The silence hits hardest right before bed. That s when I notice I haven't had a single conversation all day where I felt genuinely understood, or even really seen. It s not like I m isolated in the obvious wayno one would look at my life and say I m alonebut I feel emotionally homeless a lot of the time. I ve tried to fix it in different ways. I ve overshared with acquaintances and then felt stupid and exposed. I ve pulled back and tried to be low maintenance so I don't scare people away. I ve joined group chats, Discord servers, hobby groups. I m physically present but mentally pressed up against the glass, watching everyone else connect while I hover on the edges. What messes with my head is the idea that if I disappeared, people would notice for a bit, maybe send a hey, where d you go? message, and then justadjust. I don't feel like anyone s person. I m just an optional extra. I can't tell if the problem is me not letting people in, or people not really wanting to. Or maybe

I m just fundamentally hard to attach to and I m only now fully realizing it.

Text Sample 194: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 3.00 generic_gpt/t732_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling like I m slowly disappearing from everyone s lives, including my own. I have people around me, technically. Coworkers, a few old friends I text now and then, family chats that light up my phone. But I feel like a background character in all of it. Conversations stay on the surface. I crack jokes, ask questions, listen to their problems, but when it s my turn to be honest, I freeze up or change the subject. I don't even know how to talk about what s going on in my head without feeling like I m being too much. What s weird is that I actually crave connection so badly it hurts, but at the same time, I m exhausted by even the idea of socializing. I ll turn down invitations and then feel lonely as soon as I m alone. I scroll through social media and see people hanging out, building memories, having their people, and I feel like I missed some invisible sign-up sheet years ago. I also feel like I don't have a role in anyone s life. I m not someone s go-to person. If I disappeared, people would notice eventually, but I don't think it would really change their day-to-day. That thought keeps looping in my mind at night when everything is quiet. I don't know how to fix this. I don't even know where to start. I m tired of pretending I m fine when I m not, but I m also scared that if I show how lonely I really feel, people will pull away even more. So I just keep going through the motions and hoping something shifts, but most days it all feels the same.

Text Sample 195: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 3.00 generic_gpt/t454_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to talk about this in real life, so I m dumping it here instead. Lately I ve been feeling like I m watching my own life from the outside. I go to work, I talk to people, I answer messages, but it all feels like I m just playing a role. Everyone assumes I m fine because I can make small talk and crack a joke, but as soon as I m alone it s like someone turns the volume down on everything. What bothers me most isn't that I have no one, it s that I don't feel truly known by anyone. I have friends, but they only see the version of me that s easy to digest. I don't know how to bridge that gap without feeling like I m oversharing or being a burden. So I keep it surface-level and then resent the fact that things stay surface-level. There s also this weird shame to it. I m an adult. I m supposed to have a circle, a partner, a support system. Instead I have acquaintances, group chats, and a lot of silence once the screen goes dark. I m not even sure what I m looking for by posting this. Maybe I just needed to admit out loud that I m lonely, instead of pretending I m not.

Text Sample 196: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t036_gpt.txt
I don't know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m disappearing from my own life. I m not completely isolated in the obvious sense. I have coworkers I chat with, a family group chat that occasionally pings, a couple of old friends I exchange memes with. On paper, it looks like I m connected. But none of it feels like it actually reaches me. It s like I m standing behind glass, watching myself go through the motions of being a person among other people. The worst part is how ordinary everything looks from the outside. I go to work, I answer emails, I say good weekend? on Mondays and have a good one on Fridays. I laugh at the right times. But underneath, there s this constant ache that nobody really knows me, and I m not sure I even remember how to let them. I used to have deeper friendships, but they faded slowlydifferent cities, different schedules, people pairing off and having kids. I can't point to a single moment where I lost anyone ; it was more like we all just stopped being central to each other s lives.

Now, every time I think about reaching out, I feel weirdly ashamed, like I m trying to resurrect something that quietly died years ago. I try to be proactivejoin things, say yes to invitations when they appearbut conversations never seem to get past the surface. I leave social situations feeling more alone than before, because it reminds me how far I am from the kind of closeness I actually want. Most days I just come home, sit in the quiet, scroll through other people s lives, and wonder when exactly mine started feeling like a waiting room.

Text Sample 197: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t2251_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this to people in my life, so I m dumping it here instead. I m surrounded by people but I feel like I m behind glass all the time. I go to work, make small talk, even crack jokes, and everyone would probably describe me as fine or chill. But I go home and it s like everything goes silent inside my head except this heavy awareness that nobody really knows me, and I m not sure anyone wants to. I ve had friends, relationships, all of that. But even when I m physically with someone, I feel this weird distance, like I m playing a version of myself that s easier to digest. I edit what I say so I don't sound too needy, too intense, too negative. Then I end up feeling fake, but when I try to be more honest, people slowly drift away or get uncomfortable. It s starting to feel like I m fundamentally out of sync with everyone else. I watch people talk about their group or best friend or person and I can't even imagine what it s like to feel that secure with someone. I ve moved around a lot, so there s no childhood friend who gets me, no long-term social circle. Just a lot of people I used to know. What scares me most is how normal this has started to feel. I wake up, go through the motions, distract myself with screens until I m tired enough to sleep. I tell myself it s not that bad, that I m used to it. But every so often it hits me how much of my life I m spending feeling like this, and I don't really know what to do with that.

Text Sample 198: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t2732_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m just drifting through my own life as a background character. I have people around me, technically. Coworkers, a couple of old friends I text every now and then, family chats that light up my phone. But I don't feel connected to any of it. It s like watching a group conversation through a window. I can see everyone laughing, reacting, being part of something, and I m just pressing my face against the glass. What messes with my head is that from the outside, I probably look fine. I go to work, make small talk, send memes, answer how are you? with I m good, you? like it s automatic. No one sees that once I get home, it s just silence. I put my bag down, sit on the bed, and there s this heavy, hollow feeling. Like I m missing something I can't even name. I don't think I ve ever had that person people talk about. The one you can message without overthinking, the one who actually checks in because they want to, not because it s polite. I have acquaintances who are nice enough, but I always feel like a temporary guest in their lives, never someone whose absence would really matter. I overanalyze everything I say. I replay conversations and convince myself I sounded weird or annoying. Then I pull back a bit, respond slower, become busy, and that just reinforces the distance. I know I m part of my own problem, but knowing that doesn't magically fix it. It just adds guilt on top of the loneliness. Sometimes I scroll through social media and see people doing the most mundane things togethergrocery shopping, watching movies, sitting on the floor eating takeoutand it feels like another universe. I m not even craving big parties or constant attention. I just want to feel like I belong somewhere specific, with someone specific. Most days I just go through the motions, hoping something will eventually shift, but I honestly don't know what I m waiting for or what I m supposed to do differently. It just feels like I m slowly fading out around the edges and no one s really noticing.

Text Sample 199: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t486_gpt.txt
I m starting to realize I don't actually know how to connect with people anymore. I can make small talk, crack a joke, pretend I m fine, but the second things get even slightly deeper I shut down. I watch other people slip into friendships and relationships like it s the most natural thing in the world, and I feel like I m behind glass, just observing. Most of my interactions are online, and even those feel surface-level. I overthink every message : too long, too short, too weird, too needy. Then I end up saying nothing, and the silence becomes proof that I m the problem. What scares me is how normal the loneliness is starting to feel. I wake up, go through the motions, distract myself with screens, and try not to think about how no one really knows me. It s like I m fading out of my own life and no one s noticing, including me.

Text Sample 200: POS Dim 3 generic_gpt Score 2.00 generic_gpt/t662_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird combination of invisible and exposed lately. On paper, I m not alone. I have coworkers I chat with, family I text, a couple of old friends I send memes to. But everything feels like it s happening behind glass. I can see the motions of connection, but I don't really feel touched by any of it. What gets me is how ordinary everything looks from the outside. I go to work, I respond to messages, I say yeah, I m good, just busy. No one questions it. Part of me actually prefers that, because I have no idea how to explain this kind of emptiness without sounding dramatic or ungrateful. I think what I miss is feeling known. Not just how s work? or seen this show? but the kind of familiarity where someone notices when your voice sounds off, or remembers the small things you said weeks ago. I can't remember the last time I felt that from anyone, and I m starting to forget what it s like. I also know I m part of the problem. I hold back. I overthink every message. I convince myself I m annoying, or that people are only being polite. So I retreat, then feel more disconnected, then retreat more. It s like I m building my own cage and then complaining about the bars. I don't even know what I m hoping for by writing this. Maybe just to put it somewhere outside my own head for once.

6 NEG Dim 3

Text Sample 201: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1181_gpt.txt
I m starting to realize I don't actually know how to connect with people anymore, or if I ever really did. I have acquaintances, coworkers, people I can chat with about weather, memes, whatever. But nobody I can text I m not okay without feeling like I m being weird or a burden. Every time my phone buzzes it s some notification, never an actual person reaching out just to talk to me. When it s silent, it feels like confirmation that I don't really exist for anyone outside the roles I fill. I keep thinking, I should reach out first, but then I overthink everything. I worry I m annoying, or that they re just being polite when they respond. So I wait for someone else to make the first move, and of course no one does, and the distance just grows. I watch other people make plans, post photos with friends, talk about group chats and weekly hangouts, and it feels like I m looking at a world I was never given the instructions for. I m not even sure what I m hoping for by writing this.

Text Sample 202: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1590_gpt.txt
I m starting to realize I don't actually know how to connect with people anymore. I have acquaintances, coworkers, people I can chat with about weather, TV, deadlines. But when conversations get anywhere near real, I freeze up. I either overshare and feel stupid afterward, or stay on the surface and walk away feeling invisible. Nights are the worst. I scroll through chats, see people online, but can't think of a single person I feel comfortable messaging without worrying I m annoying them. When my phone lights up, it s usually a notification, not a person. What gets me is that from the outside I probably look fine : I show up, make jokes, get work done. Inside, it feels like I m watching my own life from behind glass. I m there, but not really in it. I don't even know what I m asking for. I guess I just wanted to put it into words somewhere, instead of just letting it echo around in my head.

Text Sample 203: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1538_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to talk about this in my real life, so I m dumping it here. Lately I feel like I m living next to people instead of with them. I have coworkers, acquaintances, people I chat with about weather and TV shows, but no one who actually knows me. I go home, close the door, and it s justquiet. Not peaceful quiet, more like if I disappeared, the day would sound exactly the same quiet. I m at that age where everyone seems to be pairing off, having kids, planning trips with their group. My phone mostly lights up with notifications from apps, not people. If I don't start a conversation, my messages just stay empty. I m tired of always being the one who reaches out, only to get polite, delayed replies. What really messes with me is how this is becoming my normal. I m getting too used to eating alone, going to events alone, saying it s fine when it isn't. I ve started to feel awkward even when I am around people, like I ve forgotten how to be part of anything. I don't even know what I m asking for writing this. Maybe I just wanted it to exist somewhere outside my head.

Text Sample 204: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1543_gpt.txt
I m starting to feel like I m disappearing while still technically being around people. On paper my life looks fine : job, small apartment, coworkers I can make small talk with, family chats on holidays. But most days I go hours without anyone saying my name. I can go entire weekends where my phone doesn't light up unless it s spam or some automated notification. It s like I exist mostly in the periphery of other people s lives. I think what gets to me most is the lack of being known. People know the version of me that smiles at work, makes a joke in a meeting, answers I m good, you? in the hallway. No one sees the version that comes home, drops everything on the floor, and just sits in silence because there is nothing and no one to come home to. I ve tried to be proactive : joined a hobby group, said yes to after-work drinks, messaged old friends to catch up sometime. It s always surface level. We talk about TV shows, work stress, the weather. Then everyone goes back to their real lives, where they text their close friends, partners, family. I go back to my room and the quiet. There s also this weird shame about it. Like I m old enough that I should have a solid circle by now, maybe a partner, at least a couple people who d notice if I went offline for a few days. Instead I overthink every interaction, wondering if I m too much, or not enough, or just forgettable. I don't even know what I want from posting this. Maybe just to put it somewhere outside my own head for once.

Text Sample 205: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1630_gpt.txt
I ve started to realize I don't actually know how to connect with people anymore. I can talk about surface stuff just finework, weather, random memesbut the second anything feels real, I freeze up or change the subject. Then I go home and wonder why I feel invisible. My phone almost never lights up unless it s a notification from an app. I scroll through chats where I used to talk to people regularly, and now it s just dead threads and awkward we should catch up soon messages that never went anywhere. What messes with me the most is that I m technically not alone. I m around coworkers, classmates, family. But I feel like a ghost walking through other people s lives, watching them form bonds I somehow can't access. It s like I m stuck behind glass, tapping, but no one hears it.

Text Sample 206: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1756_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m living next to my own life instead of in it. On paper, I m fine. I have a job, I reply to messages, I show up when I m supposed to. People would probably describe me as quiet but nice. But there s this constant sense that I m just orbiting around everyone else, like I m close enough to see them but too far to actually be part of anything. The weird thing is I m not completely isolated. I have acquaintances, coworkers, a couple of people I can text. But it all feels shallow. Conversations stay on the surface : work, weather, memes. When I try to say something real, I feel like I m making things awkward, so I pull back and go back to nodding and smiling. Nights are the worst. I come home, eat, scroll, maybe watch something, and it s just this heavy silence. I keep my phone nearby like it s a lifeline, but it almost never lights up unless it s a notification from some app. I tell myself I should reach out first, but I get stuck in this loop of they re busy and they don't actually want to talk to me. What scares me most is how normal this is starting to feel. Like I m slowly getting used to being emotionally invisible. I can't tell if I m withdrawing because I m lonely, or lonely because I keep withdrawing. It s just this dull, constant ache I carry around, and I don't really know what to do with it anymore.

Text Sample 207: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1916_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling like I m orbiting around everyone else s lives instead of actually being in them. On paper, I m not completely alone. I have coworkers I chat with, a couple of old friends I text every now and then, family I see on holidays. But none of it feels like real connection anymore. It s like I m always on the periphery, the extra in someone else s story. What s messing with my head is how invisible this kind of loneliness is. I go to work, I answer I m good when people ask how I am, I make small talk about shows and weather and deadlines. Then I come home, close the door, and it s just this heavy silence that feels louder than any noise. I scroll through my phone hoping someone will message first, but the notifications that do come are just group chats or random memes, nothing that makes me feel actually seen. I ve also noticed I ve started pulling back even when there is an opportunity to connect. I ll get invited somewhere and suddenly I m exhausted at the thought of being on for a few hours. I cancel, tell myself I ll make up for it next time, and then hate myself for not going. It s like I want closeness but I m out of practice with it, almost afraid of it. I don't really know what I m looking for writing this. Maybe just to see my own thoughts outside my head for once, instead of watching them echo around the same empty room every night.

Text Sample 208: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t2290_gpt.txt
I m starting to feel like I m disappearing in plain sight. I m surrounded by peoplecoworkers, neighbors, even familybut I don't feel actually known by anyone. Conversations stay on the surface : work, weather, memes. I try to open up a bit and it just sort of lands with a thud. Then I feel stupid and pull back again. Nights are the worst. I scroll my phone just to feel some kind of connection, but it mostly makes me feel more left out, like I m watching everyone else live from behind glass. I can go days without anyone messaging me first. When my phone does light up, it s usually a notification, not a person. I m not sure what s wrong with me. Other people seem to form friendships naturally, like it s breathing. For me it feels like I m always forcing it, and people can tell.

Text Sample 209: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t2345_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisible and too much at the same time. I have people around mecoworkers, a few acquaintancesbut I don't feel known by anyone. Most conversations stay on the surface : work, weather, memes. I laugh along, but it feels like I m playing a character I don't even like. What gets to me is how constant it is. I can go an entire week without a single genuine check-in from anyone. My phone only lights up for group chats or random notifications. When I try to open up, I feel like I m oversharing or making things awkward, so I pull back again. Nights are the worst. I replay old conversations, wonder what s wrong with me, and then wake up exhausted to repeat the same pattern. It s like living behind glass.

Text Sample 210: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t2589_gpt.txt
I m starting to realize I m not just a bit introverted, I m actually lonely in a way that s starting to feel like a personality trait. My days are weirdly full and completely empty at the same time. I go to work, I answer emails, I make small talk about weather and TV shows, and then I come home and it s like I vanish. My phone barely buzzes unless it s a notification from an app. When I scroll through my contacts, I see names but no one I feel like I can text without overthinking it. What bothers me most is how invisible it feels. I can be surrounded by people and still feel like I m standing behind glass. I laugh at the right moments, say the right things, and no one notices that my mind is just looping on, You don't really belong here. I ve also started lying when people ask what I m doing on the weekend. I say meeting friends or going out when really I m just trying to make the hours pass without thinking too hard about any of this.

Text Sample 211: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t2762_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling like I m fading into the background of my own life. I have people around mecoworkers, acquaintances, even family I see sometimesbut I don't feel known by anyone. Conversations stay on the surface : work, the weather, random small talk. I can't remember the last time someone asked how I really was and actually wanted to hear the answer. I try to reach out, but it always feels like I m intruding, like I m the extra person in every group. I ll send a message, get a polite reply, and then it just dies. I start wondering if I m just fundamentally forgettable. Nights are the worst. I scroll through my phone, hoping for a notification that never comes, then put it down and just lie there, feeling this heavy, quiet emptiness that I don't know what to do with.

Text Sample 212: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1337_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird mix of invisibility and overexposure lately. Like I m surrounded by peopleat work, online, even in my own familybut I still feel like no one actually sees me. Conversations stay on the surface : weather, deadlines, memes. I can talk, joke, seem fine, but it all feels like acting. What really messes with me is how hard it is to cross that line into real connection. I don't know how to say, Hey, I m lonely, without feeling pathetic or needy. When I ve tried to open up in the past, people either minimized it, changed the subject, or gave quick-fix advice. After enough of that, you start thinking, Maybe I should just keep this to myself. Nights are the worst. The day winds down, the notifications stop, and it s just me and the noise in my head. I scroll, I watch videos, I listen to podcasts just to fill the silence, but it doesn't really touch the feeling. It s like being homesick for a place I ve never actually had.

Text Sample 213: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -2.00 generic_gpt/t1191_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling this weird combination of invisible and too exposed at the same time. I m surrounded by people most dayscoworkers, strangers on the train, notifications popping upbut it all feels like static. I can talk about work, the weather, memes, but the second I try to say anything real, it s like the words get stuck somewhere between my chest and my throat. What bothers me most is how normalized it s become. I wake up, go through the motions, scroll through other people s lives, and tell myself I m fine because technically nothing is wrong. But it s like I m living next to my own life instead of in it. I keep thinking I should reach out more, initiate plans, be social, but the fear of being an obligation to others keeps me quiet. So I just stay here, watching everything from a distance.

Text Sample 214: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -1.00 generic_gpt/t1162_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is happening in a soundproof room. I go to work, I talk to people, I crack jokes, I answer emails. On paper, I m social. I m the person others describe as easy to talk to or chill. But the second I m alone, it s like someone pulls the plug and everything goes quiet. Not peaceful quiet, just empty. What messes with my head is that I don't actually lack people around me. I have coworkers, some acquaintances, a group chat that lights up with memes. But there s no one I feel like I can text and say, Hey, I m not okay, can you just be here? I scroll through my contacts and realize there isn't a single person I d feel comfortable being fully honest with. It s like I m surrounded and still completely unreachable. Nights are the worst. I ll lie in bed with my phone, hoping for some notification that isn't spam or a random app update. I ll open social media just to see other people hanging out, going on trips, posting pictures with captions about my people and the best weekend ever. I m happy for them in theory, but there s this sharp, weird ache that hits when I realize I don't have my people. I ve tried joining clubs, going to meetups, talking to people more. It always feels like everyone else already has their lives and their circles set, and I m this extra piece that doesn't fit anywhere. I can be friendly, but I can't seem to move past that surface level into something real. I don't even know what I m asking for by posting this. Maybe I just needed to say out loud that I m lonely, because pretending I m fine is starting to feel heavier than the loneliness itself.

Text Sample 215: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -1.00 generic_gpt/t1205_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to start this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like my life is just background noise. I m surrounded by people most days work, errands, public transport but I feel like a ghost slipping around the edges. I talk to coworkers, I make small jokes, I nod at the right times. Then I go home, close the door, and it s like I never existed in the first place. No one checks in. My phone is mostly silent unless it s a notification from some app that doesn't actually care I exist. I ve had friends before, or at least I thought I did. Over time, people drifted away : moved, got partners, had kids, got busy. I understand that life changes, but it s like I got left in an earlier chapter everyone else outgrew. When I try to reconnect or make new friends, it feels forced, like I m auditioning for a role I m not quite right for. What really gets to me is that I m not even sure how to be close to people anymore. When someone asks How are you? my automatic response is I m good, you? even when I m not. I don't know how to bridge the gap between small talk and actually saying, I m lonely and I don't know what to do about it. Nights are the worst. There s this heavy awareness that no one really knows me in any deep way right now, and I m not sure if that s my fault or just how things turned out. I keep wondering if this is just how adulthood is for some of us, or if I missed some crucial step everyone else seemed to understand.

Text Sample 216: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -1.00 generic_gpt/t1225_gpt.txt
I ve been feeling like I m slowly drifting out of everyone s life and I don't know how to stop it. I m not completely isolated. I have coworkers, I see people, I can make small talk. But there s this huge gap between people I interact with and people who actually know me, and that gap feels like an ocean lately. I watch other people s friendships and it looks so effortless. Group chats that are constantly active, people doing random weeknight hangouts, calling each other just to talk about nothing. I can't remember the last time someone texted me first just to see how I was doing. When my phone buzzes, it s usually spam, a notification, or something work-related. I ve started leaving it in another room because the silence from it feels worse when it s right next to me. I also feel like I ve become forgettable. I show up, I m polite, I contribute, but if I stopped showing up, I m not convinced anyone would really notice for a while. It s like I m always the nice acquaintance, never the person someone thinks of when they re planning something important or fun. What scares me is that I can feel myself withdrawing more. I say no to invites because I m tired or anxious, then later I m sitting alone wishing I d gone. But when I do go, I feel like I m on the outside of the group, even if I m physically there. I laugh at the right times and nod along, but it feels like I m playing a role instead of actually connecting. I don't really know what I m hoping for by writing this. Maybe I just wanted to put into words that weird, heavy feeling of being surrounded by people and still feeling completely alone.

Text Sample 217: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -1.00 generic_gpt/t1218_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like I m disappearing in slow motion. On paper, I m fine. I have a job, I answer emails, I show up to meetings, I say yeah, weekend was good, you? and people nod and move on. I scroll group chats, occasionally react with a thumbs-up, but I can't remember the last time I actually felt connected to anyone. It s like I m always slightly behind a pane of glass watching everyone else live in real time. I used to have friends I d message just to share some random thought. Now I stare at the chat box, type something, delete it, and convince myself they re too busy or I d just be annoying. Days go by and the only notifications I get are spam and work stuff. I tell myself I m introverted or independent, but the silence feels less like peace and more like neglect. The worst part is how it messes with how I see myself. When no one really knows you beyond small talk, you start wondering if there s even anything worth knowing. I ve become weirdly self-conscious about everythingmy voice, my laugh, the way I standlike I m rehearsing for an audience that never actually shows up. I don't even know what I m hoping for posting this. Maybe just to put into words that I exist, that I m here, even if it feels like no one would really notice if I wasn't.

Text Sample 218: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -1.00 generic_gpt/t1230_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but lately it feels like

I ve just slipped out of everyone s peripheral vision. My phone barely buzzes unless it s a notification from some app. Group chats that I used to be part of are still active, but I m more like a silent observer now. I ll type something, stare at it, and then delete it because I convince myself no one s waiting to hear from me anyway. When I do send something, it usually gets buried between memes and other conversations, and I feel stupid for even trying. In person isn't much better. I go to work, talk about tasks and deadlines, laugh at the right times, but it s all surface-level. I ve become that reliable coworker, but not someone anyone actually knows. People will say things like, We should hang out sometime, and it never actually happens. I don't even know if they mean it. The weird thing is I m not completely isolated. I see people. I interact. But I feel like I m behind glass. Like I m watching life happen instead of being part of it. I go home, make dinner for one, and then justexist. Scroll, watch something, lie in bed too long. I don't even have some big trauma story to justify why I feel this empty. It s just this dull, ongoing ache. I keep thinking that if I disappeared from social media or stopped showing up places, it would take a long time for anyone to notice. And even longer for anyone to ask why.

Text Sample 219: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -1.00 generic_gpt/t1253_gpt.txt
I don't really know how to explain this without sounding dramatic, but I feel like I m slowly disappearing from everyone s life and nobody notices. My phone almost never lights up unless it s some random notification. Group chats moved on without me. When I try to jump in, the conversation dies, and I end up feeling like I ruined the vibe just by showing up. I ve stopped suggesting plans because we should hang out sometime never turns into an actual day or time. At work I m friendly with people, but it s all surface-level. No one really knows what s going on with me, and honestly I don't know how to let them. I overthink every message, every silence, every seen-but-not-replied-to. What scares me most is how normal this is starting to feel. Like this is just my life now, and I m getting used to it.

Text Sample 220: NEG Dim 3 generic_gpt Score -1.00 generic_gpt/t1249_gpt.txt
Lately I ve been feeling like a background character in my own life. I go through the motionswork, errands, scrolling on my phonebut it all feels muted, like I m behind a pane of glass watching everyone else actually live. I have people around me, technically. Coworkers, acquaintances, family chats. But I don't feel known by any of them. Conversations stay on the surface : weather, work complaints, memes. I can't remember the last time someone asked how I really am and actually wanted to hear the answer. I m at this weird point where I crave connection so badly, but I m exhausted by every attempt. I overthink every message, every silence, every seen with no reply. Then I feel pathetic for caring so much. What scares me is how normal this is starting to feel. The quiet evenings, the empty weekends, the constant sense that if I disappeared, life would go on exactly the same for everyone else.

Text Sample 221: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t093_gpt.txt
What s everyone up to this weekend? Today I took my 3¡-year-old twin boys to a local garden centre that has a soft play area. They burned off some energy while I picked up a few bits to refresh our front garden. Tonight I m planning to watch Venom on Netflix with my wife. Tomorrow s still a bit up in the air and kind of depends on the weather. Curious what you re all doing, if anything.

Text Sample 222: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1732_gpt.txt
I haven't really hung out with anyone in a long time and I m basically always at home. I ve met some cool people online, but they all live way too far away in other parts of New York, so actually seeing them in person almost never happens. It just makes the loneliness feel worse sometimes. I really wish I could meet people in NYC who d be down to just chat, maybe grab a coffee or walk around once the weather gets better. I keep seeing advice about finding happiness from within, but honestly, that hasn't worked for me. I feel like I really need actual human connection, and I m not sure how to find it.

Text Sample 223: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1806_gpt.txt
Lately it feels like I don't really exist to anyone. My phone never goes off unless it s a random notification, my email is just bills, and the only person who calls me is my mom once in a while. I m not some terrible person (at least I don't think so) and I m pretty quiet, but I just can't seem to maintain friendships or keep people interested in talking to me. I m so tired of feeling this alone. How do people who are lonely actually stop being lonely without coming across as desperate or needy? Any advice or personal experiences would help.

Text Sample 224: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t190_gpt.txt
It s a chilly, rainy day here in Virginia Beach, so I m just planning to relax on the couch until my dog-sitting clients arrive for their little spring break dog vacation. Kind of cozy, honestly. Curious what everyone else is up to todayanything fun or just surviving the weather?

Text Sample 225: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t1996_gpt.txt
I m 54, introverted, and honestly feel like I m trying to relearn how to be a person around other people. I haven't really had friends since the 90s. Somewhere along the way I just stopped. Now I m trying to change that, even though I feel kind of ridiculous. I don't drink, so instead of bars I ve been taking my laptop to different coffee shops. I set tiny goals for myself : say one nice thing to a stranger, make a comment about the weather, compliment someone s shirt. If that goes okay, I try to stretch it into a short conversation. It sounds so basic, but for me it s huge. What s weird is I remember being very social once. It feels like I m trying to reconnect with a version of myself I lost. I m also counting Reddit and other online spaces as real interaction. When in-person stuff feels impossible, at least writing to people here is something.

Text Sample 226: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2347_gpt.txt
I m a first-year student and I feel like I ve somehow managed to be completely alone on a campus of over 40,000 people. I came here far from home only knowing two people, and I ve cut ties with both of them for various reasons. That already makes me feel like something is wrong with me. It s been six months and I still haven't made any real friends. Every time I try to talk to people, I get this overwhelming feeling that they re disgusted by me or just want me to go away. I can't tell if that s actually true or just in my head, but it s enough to make me shut down. I tried to be proactive. I applied to a bunch of social organizations and got rejected from all of them. I did get into one pre-professional group with a mentorship program, but it s barely met and hasn't helped me connect with anyone. I keep waiting for something to click and it just doesn't. My roommate goes out all the time, and it just makes me feel even worse. It s like I m watching the normal college experience happen right next to me while I m stuck on the outside. I even turned down an invitation to go out because I was convinced they didn't really want me there and were just being polite. Most of my time is spent alone. I hide in corners on campus so I don't look like the awkward person with no one to sit with. During the recent weather closures, I literally didn't leave my room for days. I m honestly shocked that I can feel this invisible and unwanted in a place with so many people. I don't know how to break out of this, and it s starting to really scare me.

Text Sample 227: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2372_gpt.txt
I feel so lonely lately that my phone is basically just a clock. Days go by without any real notifications or messages. It sounds pathetic, but I keep wishing there was an app that would send fake social media notifications and messages throughout the day, just so I could feel like I m part of something. Even if it was all simulated, I think those little artificial dopamine hits might make this crushing emptiness a bit more bearable. I hate that I m desperate enough to want that.

Text Sample 228: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2795_gpt.txt
Does anyone else get that tiny rush of excitement when their text tone goes off, only to feel stupid and disappointed when it s just another Amazon your order shipped or delivered notification? It really highlights how lonely I feel.

Text Sample 229: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t2793_gpt.txt
Over the summer I got really into kayak fishing. I d spend whole days alone on the water, getting high and fishing, and it was honestly perfect. Now the weather s bad and cold, and my weekends feel so empty and boring. I don't know what to do with myself. I do have a hike planned for late winter after avalanche season, but that feels far away.

Text Sample 230: NEG Dim 3 summary_guided_gpt Score -1.00 summary_guided_gpt/t464_gpt.txt
I m so tired of people being rude when I reach out just to talk. No one is forcing you to reply to my message. You can ignore it, block me, whatever. But snapping at me? Seriously? Sorry my little notification disappointed you. I m just trying to connect, not ruin your day.

Text Sample 231: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t2543_human.txt
For those who have been single for a while. How do you deal with that lonely feeling of not receiving that"good morning"text anymore or having someone to genuinely confide in who cares? I honestly miss those days where we could ramble on for days about absolutely nothing. Don't get me wrong, I wouldn't go back to an ex because they 're your ex for a reason. But that depressing alone feeling won't go away. My phone now barely gets any notifications besides updates about local news. I 've joined some clubs to make some in real life friends but it just doesn't feel the same. I just miss that feeling of being wanted by that one person .

Text Sample 232: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t464_human.txt
You can always ignore my text If you don't want to talk to me lmao! I don't get this kind of people who talk to you with such rudeness just because you tried to reach out. No one is forcing you to talk to me bruh. Sorry my notification disappointed you.

Text Sample 233: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t501_human.txt
The only time I get an exciting notification is when I order something online. Otherwise it s all just ads and my internet service provider bill.

Text Sample 234: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t093_human.txt
What have you been doing, plans etc. However trivial or small. Tell us what you will be up to over this weekend. Myself : today took the kids (twin boys 3 1/2) to local garden centre soft play. Picked up a few things to update the look and feel of my front garden. Tonight I m going to be watching Vemon on Netflix with the wife. Tomorrow not sure what We are doing yet, mostly depends on the weather.

Text Sample 235: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t1553_human.txt
I don't know why i feel like this but when i see my phone with no notifications, i see people around me having fun with others i just feel sad. I have no one to talk to. I need someone i can tell things, who wants to talk to me by themselves. It is juct nobody ever reaches out to me, nobody calls, msgs talks ever. It feels like my absence isn't noted. I am used to it at this point, I am used to sitting alone in my room and watching movies, used to going to watch movies. I recently started watching F1 and u know i want to talk to someone about it. I just jump from one thing to another to preoccupy my mind but i sometimes when i am sitting alone in my room it just hits me. I want to feel important. I guess it is my fault, i also don't reach out to anybody, never talk to anybody in college, i just go to classes and come back to my room. My school friends didn't talk much to me before hand either but i was at home preoccupied by my enterance preparation so i could just ignore it, but now when i sit idle the wave of loneliness hits me. U know when u are passionate about a topic and like to just find someone and talk to someone about it u know like star wars, marvel/dc or f1 or anything but like nobody seems intrested so i just sit in my room. I have started to talk to myself in my head having conversations usually with this girl i liked alot. I can't talk to her for reasons. I am losing my mind. I have long conversations in head everyday but i never talk to anyone, i am just a boring person, i don't like to party listen to loud songs.

Text Sample 236: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t1732_human.txt
It s been a while since I ve hung out with anyone. I ve come across some cool people on here but I wish I d meet people from nyc who were down to chat and hangout but not rn only when the weather gets better. Some of the online friends I have live in further parts of ny so I never get to see em which is why I spend most of my time in the house cause there s really no point in going out if I have no one to hang with. Ik some people will being happy comes from within but I ve already tried that and it s gotten me nowhere.

Text Sample 237: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t2328_human.txt
I 've been feeling pretty shitty again. This is just a post to kinda write about how I feel and maybe someone just wants to talk? Life comes with ups and downs, I 'm in the down period agian. I feel lonely, empty, cold. I just want a warm feeling, a nice compliment, just a nice conversation. I feel like doing nothing at all but I 'm also bored. Everything feels suffocating. I fockin hate this. The weather 's down aswell so that doesn't help either. I just miss certain times and certain people. This post is going from one thing to the other, sorry. I 'm just writing what 's in my mind. Anyone wants to have a nice conversation? Maybe we can be online friends! I do play some PC games so maybe game buddies?

Text Sample 238: NEG Dim 3 human Score -1.00 human/t2372_human.txt
I wish there was something like this available. I know it s really sad but this is where I m at. It would be cool if there was an app where you could receive simulated notifications and messages throughout the day from simulated social media apps so I could at least feel like I m still connected with the world. I barely get any real notifications or messages these days. An illusion like this could help with my crippling loneliness? Artificial dopamine hits, sign me up.

Text Sample 239: NEG Dim 3 human Score 1.00 human/t2503_human.txt
I don't know what s happened to me, but In the past couple years i have become unable to manage and maintain friendships. I don't even know the first step to texting someone and keeping in touch anymore. the past 2 years i haven't really made a single new friend that became anything more to me than a face i see here and there. No one reaches out to me, and im pretty sure thats my fault. i think i push people away without consciously knowing it? Somehow i have managed to keep my girlfriend for a while now, and im so grateful that i have her. If i didn't i don't know what id do, I literally have no one else. not a single person. My home life isn't an escape either because my family is always miserable and gets angry at me. I feel like i could disappear pretty easily. I freak out when i try to get close to people because i worry i will say something wrong or I ll get misread, but that makes people not like me anyways. I don't really know if im asking for advice I just needed to get this off my chest.

Text Sample 240: NEG Dim 3 human Score 1.00 human/t2502_human.txt
One thing I really hate about myself is that I can't receive kindness or attention from a woman without developing some sort of feelings for her eventually. Even if I keep telling myself she s just being nice it s just friendly there s a small dumb part of me that still develops those feelings anyway. I ve been through this enough times that I should know for sure by now that it s always just them being nice but I can't seem to stop it. Then it always just ends up being weird and I have to remove myself from the situation completely to avoid making things even more weird or having my feelings hurt when it turns out they already had someone else in the first place.